JAPAN IS TOLD IT HAS NO RIGHT TO MANCHURIA

Seizure Condemned in League Report.

BULLETIN.

TOKIO, Oct. 3 (Monday).—(AP)—The war office today issued a statement declaring that if the assembly of the league of nations acts in the spirit of the Lytton report, Japan will have no alternative but to withdraw from the league and to oppose its action with the firmest determination. The war office communique came after army leaders had gathered to consider the Lytton report as it was made public in Geneva yesterday.

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Oct. 2.—The report of the league of nations commission on Manchuria, which was made public today, clearly puts Japan in a hole.

Six weeks will elapse before the council of the league, and after it, the special meeting of the assembly, meet to consider this 148 page assessment of Japan's military adventure in the Chinese "three eastern provinces," but Japan stands condemned.

Autonomy Is Urged.

"We have insisted less on the responsibility for past actions than on the necessity for finding means to avoid their repetition."

This solution, on which the council and assembly will have to pass, calls for the establishment of an autonomous demilitarized Manchuria under Chinese sovereignty. The details of its status are to be agreed upon at an advisory Sino-Japanese conference following the recommendations of the league and with the league council sitting as arbiter.

What it Simmers Down to.

It all comes down to this:

Japan was told in so many words that she would be wise in surrendering her political and military ambitions in Manchuria so as better to realize on and further her economic interests.

And—what is undoubtedly a bitter pill — she was urged to recognize Chinese sovereignty in a region where, at great pains and while being frowned on by the international community of nations, she set up a puppet government and duly recognized its independence. Moreover, Japan was advised to evacuate her troops in favor of a special gendarmerie under foreign instructors which would constitute the only armed force in Manchuria.

Tokio and Nanking received the report first and already Japanese comments have reached Geneva. The pleasure which fell upon the league over the crisp and bold report of the commission headed by Lord Lytton of Great Britain, which stands to become a classic among documents of state, has been marred by the ominous tone of the Japanese foreign office.

On Road to Decisions.

League procedure requires acceptance of the recommendations of the council and assembly by both parties to the dispute or else a resort to sanctions. That the league is now willynilly on the road to great decisions nobody doubts and this realization, while nervewracking to many, has cleared the air.

Will the United States lead or follow is one question being asked by many diplomats here tonight.

The report, written in such brilliant English as to have started a search for the author, gives a graphic account with fascinating deviations of the search for the elusive truth of Japan's Manchurian fling.

Findings Are Clear Cut.

The commission's findings, even when superficially restrained, are clear cut. It holds up practically to ridicule the Mukden incident of Sept. 18, 1931, over which Japan jumped off to the occupation of Manchuria. It intimates the whole thing was planned.

"But even in Japan," says the report in a tart passage, "appropriate means must be found for attainment of every end."

Dealing with the historic explosion of the South Manchuria railway tracks near Mukden which was the excuse for the big leap, the report gives the versions of both China and Japan. The Japanese claims that there was a break in the line of 31 inches, but "the Changchun Express," says the report, "passed over it at full speed, was seen to sway and keel to one side, but recovered, passed on without

Yanks Crush Cubs, 13-6; Win Title

CHICAGO PITCHERS ALL LOOK ALIKE TO NEW CHAMPS

The New York Yankees returned the baseball championship of the world to the American league yesterday by beating the Cubs, 13 to 6, for their fourth victory in as many games.

The final game was decided in the seventh inning when the Yankees scored four runs, breaking a 5 all tie. Guy Bush of the Cubs and Johnny Allen of the Yankees, the starting pitchers, both failed to last the first inning.

Lon Warneke, Jakie May, Bud Tinning and Burleigh Grimes followed Bush in that order. Allen gave way to Wiley Moore, who later was replaced by Herb Pennock.

Tony Lazzeri of the Yankees hit two home runs, one off Warneke and the other off Grimes. Grimes also yielded a home run to Earl Combs. Frank Demaree, recruit center fielder, hit the only Cub homer, a drive that scored three of the Chicagoans' four runs in the first inning. Score:

Batteries—Allen, Moore, Pennock, and Dickey; Bush, Warneke, May, Tinning, Grimes and Hartnett, Hemsley.

HOW ABOUT IT OFFICER?

STRAY SHOT FROM TARGET GUN KILLS WOMAN IN HOME

Miss Mildred Langrede, 26 years old, was shot in the neck and fatally wounded yesterday by a bullet accidentally fired by Donald M. Burrows of 5847 South Michigan avenue. The accident occurred at the Langrede home in Beecher, south of Chicago Heights, in Will county.

Burrows was visiting the Langredes. During the afternoon he went into the back yard for target practice with a small calibre rifle. The weapon was accidentally discharged in his hands. The bullet ripped through a screen door into the kitchen where Miss Langrede was sitting. She was taken to St. James hospital in Chicago Heights, where she died.

Another accidental gun victim of the day was William Heffernan, 18 years old, of 3729 Fifth avenue. He was shot in the face when a small revolver, held by his chum, Robert Joyce, also 18, was accidentally discharged. The shooting occurred in Joyce's home at 3554 Polk street.

VANITY FAIR'S EDITOR KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

Mount Kisco, N. Y., Oct. 2.—[Special.]—Donald Freeman, managing editor of Vanity Fair, was fatally injured tonight when his roadster crashed into a traffic stanchion on the Bronx river parkway. He died without regaining consciousness.

Freeman, who was 29 years old, had been a member of the staff of Vanity Fair for eight years, joining the magazine following his graduation from Columbia university.

Grass Fires Peril Summer Homes Near Lake Geneva

A prairie fire swept from Pell lake to Lake Ivanhoe, near Lake Geneva, Wis., yesterday, imperiling scores of summer homes at both lakes. The fire started in the vicinity of Pell lake and was carried northward by the wind. It covered hundreds of acres in its four mile course, damaging several wooded tracts and finally striking into the tamarack swamps. Firemen from the Genoa department and hundreds of volunteer firemen finally checked the blaze.

Shoots Son Who Refuses to Quit Chewing Tobacco

Welch, W. Va., Oct. 2.—(AP)—Disobeying his father's order to quit chewing chewing tobacco, Donato Billini, 16, was shot to death today.

The father, John Billini, a blacksmith of Anawalt, near here, was brought to Welch to face a slaying charge.

Drive Started to Feed Hungry School Pupils

A campaign for contributions to the Hungry School Children's fund, sponsored by THE TRIBUNE, will start today. The fund reached a total of more than $49,000 last year and through it thousands of poor children in schools throughout the city were given at least one meal a day.

William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, yesterday expressed his gratitude for the fund and his hope that it would be continued this year. "It is impossible to estimate the benefits which this fund has brought to the families of thousands of pupils in our schools," Mr. Bogan said in a letter to THE TRIBUNE. "The children have shown gains in health and in school accomplishment, to say nothing of the sense of security which has been given to their families."

Pupils in 200 Schools Fed.

Mr. Bogan announced that the pupils in more than 200 public schools received aid last winter and spring. In schools where facilities were lacking for cooking food, milk and graham crackers were given to supplement an otherwise inadequate diet. In the weeks of greatest need 10,000 pupils received at least one meal each day, according to Mr. Bogan, and in all more than 600,000 meals were furnished through this fund subscribed by TRIBUNE readers.

"In the name of thousands of underprivileged children who face another year of need," Mr. Bogan's letter concluded, "I beg that THE TRIBUNE will allot us a generous portion of available charity funds and resume its appeal to the interested citizens of the community."

Another letter asking that the fund be continued came from Miss Frances L. Swain, head of the household arts department for the school board. Miss Swain revealed that requests were pouring in from school teachers in the poorer districts for money with which to feed their pupils.

All of Fund for Food.

Miss Swain pointed out that all the money collected in the Hungry School Children's fund was spent on food alone. The work of administration, cooking, and serving the meals was carried on by the regular employes of Miss Swain's department. In many of the schools Parent-Teacher association mothers pitched in and did the work in order that the children might be fed.

A committee of eight women, including Miss Swain, administered the fund last year. The other members were Mrs. James Graham, Mrs. Thomas B. Stephenson, Mrs. Samuel Lawton, Mrs. C. P. Schwartz, Miss Louella Chapin, Mrs. A. Richard Frank, Mrs. E. D. Pomeroy, and Mrs. Philip Schwartz.

Mrs. Stephenson, who is director of district 1 of the parent-teacher organizations, which includes 87 schools on the south side, urged that the fund be resumed. "Otherwise a great hardship will befall the needy children in our schools," she said. "Thousands of children are able to go to school because THE TRIBUNE fund provides food for them that they would not get any other way."

Hopes Fund Will Go On.

Mrs. Holland Flagler, president of the Illinois congress of parent-teacher organizations, declared that her members knew the value of the fund and hoped that it would continue.

The fund was started last Oct. 15 when THE TRIBUNE heard that pupils were fainting in their classrooms from hunger. An appeal was made to readers of this newspaper to contribute and the response was instantaneous.

Contributions may be mailed to the Hungry School Children's Fund, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Tribune Tower. Contributors are requested to use the coupon which will be found on page 14.

U. S. JUDGE ASKS YOUNG INSULL TO RETURN HERE

Wanted for Hearing on Bankruptcy.

The return of Samuel Insull Jr. from Paris, where his mother is ill, for questioning in connection with the bankruptcy action against two of the Insull investment companies, was requested last Friday by Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley. This became known yesterday while State's Attorney John A. Swanson awaited replies to messages sent Saturday asking Samuel Insull Sr., who is also in Paris; his brother, Martin Insull, who is in Canada, and Samuel Insull Jr. whether they would return voluntarily.

JUDGE LINDLEY.

Judge Lindley, in confirming the report that young Insull had been asked to return, said he had been assured by James Simpson, who succeeded Samuel Insull as chairman of the boards of the Commonwealth Edison company, of the Peoples Gas, and of the Public Service of Northern Illinois that no subpoena would be necessary and that Mr. Insull would return soon.

Expected Here for Hearing.

It was stated that the former magnate's son is expected to be here for the next hearing of the bankruptcy cases of Insull Utility Investments, Inc., and Corporation Securities, Inc., of which he was president prior to the collapse of the two billion dollar utility empire. A hearing to discover assets of these defunct companies was continued to Oct. 11 by Judge Lindley on Friday.

The return of young Insull was requested by Attorneys Lewis F. Jacobson and Harold F. White, counsel for the petitioning creditors.

"It is necessary to question Mr. Insull about certain matters relating to the companies," said Judge Lindley. "Mr. Simpson was asked to communicate with him and this was done. Mr. Simpson assured me that Mr. Insull would return as soon as he had visited his mother, who is ill."

May Call Massmeeting.

State's Attorney Swanson sent for the Insulls after his investigation revealed that funds of the Middle West Utility company were used, with Samuel Insull Sr.'s approval, to protect brokerage accounts of Martin Insull. At the Criminal court building yesterday no cablegrams had been received.

The state's attorney said he was contemplating the calling of a massmeeting of investors who lost virtually everything they had in the Insull enterprises and explaining the difficulty of conducting his investigation without funds. The Democratic county board has refused a request for $50,000 by Mr. Swanson; the Republican nominee for reelection. The prosecutor said he might ask the investors to carry a protest to the county board members at their next meeting.

Two Officers Questioned.

Only two officers of the Insull Utility Investments company have been available for questioning in the hearings to discover assets—P. J. McEnroe and John F. O'Keefe. In their examination of these men, vice president and secretary-treasurer respectively, the lawyers for the creditors have sought to show that cash dividends were paid on preferred stocks with funds from capital, a violation of the Illinois securities statutes that would make the directors liable.

Samuel Insull Jr. presumably will be questioned on this and also about the pledging of the company's securities for bank loans without equally securing outstanding debentures. Young Insull, with H. L. Stuart, president of Halsey, Stuart & Co., conducted all the negotiations with New York banks last winter, when the company was unable to meet maturities totaling some $40,000,000, and the banks were forced to grant an extension.

The loans had not been repaid when the company went into receivership and later bankruptcy.

Mexico Warns Pope It May Shut Churches

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 2.—(AP)—President Abelardo L. Rodriguez tonight issued a statement declaring that all the Catholic churches in Mexico would be retired from religious use if the Catholic church's attitude as "shown in the recent papal encyclical" should continue.

The president declared that "methods filled with falsehoods" against Mexico were characteristic of the papacy and termed "insolent" the defiant attitude shown in the recent encyclical issued from Vatican City.

Calls Attitude Insolent.

"If the insolent, defiant attitude shown in the recent encyclical continues," the president declared, "I am determined that the churches shall be converted into schools and shops for the benefit of the nation's proletarian classes."

[Pope Pius XI met what he called "the new and legal persecution" of the church and Catholics in Mexico last Friday with an encyclical announcing a policy of "formal cooperation" without renouncing principles or withdrawing past denunciation.

The pope renewed his protest, directed particularly at the varied application of the laws limiting the number of priests in each state to from one for each 33,000 people to one for each 100,000.

The pontiff said approval or spontaneous real cooperation was forbidden, but decided on formal cooperation. The Mexican government was charged by the pontiff with "acting against the spirit in which the modus vivendi was conducted in 1929."]

Filled with Falsehoods.

The president's statement follows:

"In an unforeseen and absurd manner there has been published the encyclical Acerba Animi, whose tone does not surprise us because methods filled with falsehood against this country are characteristic of the papacy.

"To protest against the laws that in their conception oppress the liberty of the church openly incites the Mexican clergy to disobedience of existing laws and provokes a social disorder within the eternal work of the clergy, which is unable to resign itself to the loss of its dominion of souls and possession of property by which means it held in complete lethargy the proletarian classes that were impiously exploited.

"Mexico now has entered into a complete period of stable institutional government, of progress and achievement and it will not permit the reentry into national affairs of a subject whose existence is not recognized in our laws that have provided for the complete separation of the church and the state.

Will Not Tolerate Dominion.

"The present government, which emanated from the revolution, founded on principles that included the complete spiritual liberation and defanatization of the people, enjoys the full support of the nation's masses, which will not tolerate dominion of a foreign power.

"In answer to the open incitation made to the clergy to provoke agitation, I declare that at the slightest manifestation of disorder, the government will proceed with full energy to definitely resolve this problem that has cost this nation so much blood and sacrifice.

"I fully respect liberty of worship established by the nation's constitution, but I cannot tolerate those who do not know how to do honor to their own religion, and utilize the property of the nation to form a hostile campaign against the government.

"If the insolent, defiant attitude shown in the recent encyclical continues, I am determined that the churches shall be converted into schools and shops for the benefit of the nation's proletarian classes."

PRESIDENT OFF FOR DES MOINES TO OPEN BATTLE

Speech to Challenge Gov. Roosevelt.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 2.—[Special.]—The Republican drive to turn back the challenge of Franklin D. Roosevelt and secure another four year lease on the White House for the Hoover family is slated to reach a new high pitch of intensity this coming week with the President personally leading his shock troops into action.

The zero hour for the President's first invasion of the west of the 1932 campaign comes early tomorrow afternoon when Candidate Hoover and a large party of officials, friends, newspaper men, photographers, and secret service agents boards a special train for Des Moines, Ia. Just twenty-four hours later President Hoover is scheduled to arrive at the Iowa capital. After four hours of parades and political fanfare he will deliver his first campaign speech and sound a plea for his reelection.

Trip Regarded as Vital.

Surpassing interest attaches to the President's trip into the heart of the normally Republican corn belt, now seething with discontent over the present level of prices for farm products. Trained political observers close to the White House predict this spectacular trip of the President into the middle west will make or break the party's prospects for maintaining control of the federal government for another four years.

His trip also is to be an acid test of the truth of reports concerning the personal hostility toward the President throughout the country. The ears of the President's campaign managers and political associates will be strained to catch every inflection of pleasure, every murmur of discontent which marks the passage of the President through a section of the country reported a hotbed of dissatisfaction with the party in power.

See Campaign Crisis Near.

Unless the President by a personal appearance before disgruntled western audiences can stem the tide of political unrest which up to date has brought forth a bumper crop of straw votes forecasting the winning of the west by the Roosevelt forces, trained political observers see chances for a Republican victory this fall dimmed. Even political leaders close to the President regard the Hoover trip as marking a crisis in the campaign.

Republican leaders such as Postmaster General Walter F. Brown expressed confidence today that the President's dash into the west will open a breach in the Democratic defenses which will make it possible for the rank and file of the Republican party workers to present the Republican case for reelection in telling fashion in all sections of the country. At any rate the President's speech will be the signal for a general intensification of the campaign throughout the west.

Drive in East Starts Soon.

The Republican drive in the east is slated to go into high gear the week following the Des Moines Republican rally. The campaign in the east where the Hoover chances are brighter than in the west will reach its first high point on Oct. 11 when former President Calvin Coolidge is slated to address a crowd of 20,000 in Madison Square Garden, New York City. President Hoover will speak in the east a few days later, perhaps at Newark, N. J.

October finds the Democrats more confident of electing a President than they have been for two decades. With election day a matter of only a little more than five weeks away, some Democratic spokesmen are predicting Roosevelt will carry virtually every state in the Union in a record breaking landslide. Democratic leaders passing through Washington insist that the election is already won. While Republican leaders are not conceding the Democratic claims there has been an air of worry in high Republican circles the last few weeks which not even the most seasoned leaders have been able to entirely conceal.

Hoover Stronger in East.

On the basis of the reports coming in from spokesmen for both parties and from newspaper men in the field, Gov. Roosevelt has at least an edge in the territory west of the Mississippi. Indications today seem to point to greater Hoover than Roosevelt strength in the east. The Republicans are claiming New York state's electoral votes but the fight there has hardly begun.

From now on until the end of the campaign, President Hoover will be in direct command of the Republican drive. Already the President is devoting several hours daily to the preparation of the speeches he will make in the campaign and in looking over the major addresses to be delivered by his political lieutenants. Mr. Hoover is in touch by telephone with leaders in all sections of the country.

Campaign Demands Time.

As the campaign progresses it is certain to take more and more of Mr. Hoover's time. The President had planned a campaign which would find him spending most of his time at his desk in the executive offices. The jolts given the Republican ticket by the Maine election and the continued reports of dissatisfaction in all sections of the west disarranged these plans. The President was told that if he was to be reelected he had to get out on the stump and work for his political life. That he is proceeding to do.

Today the President spent quietly, going to church in the morning, and discussing political matters in the afternoon with Ray Benjamin, one of his principal political lieutenants, and George Akerson, his former secretary. Within the next few days the President will have numerous short conferences with Republican leaders in the section he is visiting.

PLAN SIMPLE GREETING

Des Moines, Ia., Oct. 2.—(AP)—When the President and Mrs. Hoover return to their native Iowa Tuesday for the chief executive's major campaign talk, their welcome will be typically Iowan.

H. E. Spangler, Republican national committeeman for Iowa, announced today that Tuesday will be homecoming day for Mr. and Mrs. Hoover.

"All efforts at formality have been avoided. We want the President and Mrs. Hoover to know that our greeting is typically Iowan. We want them to feel they are still one of us," Spangler said.

After the arrival of the Presidential party at Des Moines, Mr. and Mrs. Hoover will be escorted through the business district to the home of Gov. and Mrs. Dan Turner.

A feature of the parade will be an escort of honor of 1,500 men of the American Legion, assisted by veterans of the Spanish-American and civil wars.

HORNER RESUMES HIS DOWNSTATE CAMPAIGN TODAY

Judge Henry Horner left for Springfield last night to resume campaigning for the governorship on the Democratic ticket. He will begin his fourth week of active electioneering by making speeches today at Meredosia and Quincy, after which he will enter the middle counties for the remainder of the week.

Speaking at the Roosevelt banquet Saturday night, where he introduced the presidential candidate, Judge Horner promised the governor that Illinois would give him a large majority and added: "While you solve the problems in Washington, we say, in all modesty, that we will solve them in Illinois," thus predicting his own election.

Judge Horner brought encouraging reports to his Chicago advisers when he returned last Friday from three weeks of stumping downstate. He told them of the avid interest displayed in his campaign and of the assurances of support given him by county leaders in all sections. In turn, the Chicago leaders told Judge Horner that he will carry Cook county by a large majority.

HUNT MISSING RACINE MAN.

The Chicago police were asked yesterday to search for John W. Larsen, 42 years old, an electrician, who disappeared on Sept. 17 from his home at 1839 State street, Racine.

HEATH ASSAILS ROOSEVELT DEAL FOR NOMINATION

Treasury Official Deplores "Lack of Chivalry."

Republican national headquarters in Chicago made public yesterday a statement by Ferry K. Heath of Grand Rapids, assistant secretary of the treasury, in which Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's demand for a "new deal" was made a campaign target.

FERRY K. HEATH.

"He can make his deal with Hearst, McAdoo, Garner & Co.," reads the concluding paragraph of the attack, "but he cannot make that kind of a deal with the American people."

Almost the entire statement was devoted to a criticism of the national convention strategy by means of which the Roosevelt forces swung the nomination to their candidate—William G. McAdoo's "delivery" of Texas and California, followed by the nomination of Speaker Garner, for whom those two states previously had been lined up.

Preconvention Boasts.

"Last June," said the Heath statement, "Roosevelt, Farley et al announced they would be nominated on the first ballot in the Democratic convention and that they had the votes 'in the bag.' At the convention this developed to be untrue.

"Then they wanted to change the rules of the game in the middle of it. The outcry from the Democrats of the country frightened them. So they proceeded to sit in a room with the firm of Hearst, McAdoo, Garner & Co.

"A deal was made and Roosevelt emerged with the nomination. Roosevelt is now out on the stump trying to make a deal with the American people. He is being all things to all men.

"He is appealing to old General Depression and his aid, Colonel Grouch. He is making promise after promise he cannot fulfill. He is embracing every political crackpot in the west and saying: 'If that's what you believe, that's what I believe.' And with his arm around Senator Norris, who claims to be a Republican—the only one in step—Candidate Roosevelt pins a rose on the old senator and dubs him the gentle, perfect knight. Can you beat it?

Appeal to Discontent.

"His appeal to discontent, political hatred and selfishness can be understood. His apparent knowledge of chivalry makes it impossible to understand his misstatements and distortions of facts regarding policies of the Republican party and the policies and performances of the President of the United States.

"That isn't the way they fought in the days of chivalry. That isn't the way we fight now."

A second statement issued from national headquarters was by Henry J. Allen, director of publicity, making public a letter from William R. Castle Jr., assistant secretary of state, analyzing the old question whether President Hoover had ever relinquished his American citizenship in favor of allegiance to Great Britain. Former Senator Allen said the 1928 "fictions" have been revived in the present campaign.

New Inquiry Made.

Acting Secretary Castle's letter, in reply to an inquiry from Allen, said that a new and independent inquiry into this question was made last month, and concluded:

"The department of state is the final authority on citizenship matters. I can only say that I have once more checked the records to be sure that nothing has been overlooked and can, therefore, reaffirm officially what Mr. Kellogg said four years ago—that there never has been any question of Mr. Hoover's status as an American citizen."

The Castle letter dwelt in some detail on the fact that President Hoover's name once appeared on a preliminary voting list in London.

Name on Voting List.

"He rented a house there," said the letter, "and consequently his name appeared on the tax list, as taxes are assessed upon rents. The preliminary voting rolls are made up from the tax list and Mr. Hoover's name appeared on such a list, but no alien is entitled to vote and is subject to challenge and penalty. Mr. Hoover never attempted to vote."

The national committee headquarters also issued a statement saying there will be no advance announcement of the time and place of the Chicago arrival or departure of the special train carrying President Hoover to Des Moines where he is to speak tomorrow. This is in conformity with the policy of secrecy intended to protect the President from demonstrations of a hostile character which, it is said, have been threatened.

FOUND SLAIN IN HIS HOME.

Anton Drabota, 50 years old, was found shot to death in his home at 2341 South Ridgeway avenue yesterday. Police said he had shot himself. A note said he had been despondent over a jilting by a woman.

ALBERT JUMPS INTO THE LAKE ONCE TOO OFTEN

Along in the spring when the birds began singing, Albert, who is 60 years old and a chef, leaped into the lake near North avenue. A park policeman dragged him out. Midsummer came and once more Albert threw himself into the water. Once more he was rescued.

Albert then became a ward of the Lincoln Park police. They fed him and gave him shelter, and warned him of the perils of the lake.

All that is changed now. Albert walked over to the lake at North avenue last night and leaped into the water for the third time. Park Policeman A. W. Waddington fished him out. Then Waddington took him to the station and booked him for disorderly conduct.

"Albert's running us a big cleaning bill," explained Waddington. "We can't afford to get our suits wet any more saving him."

Body of Wheaton Woman Found in Michigan River

The body of Miss Edna L. Russell, 45 years old, of 513 North Washington street, Wheaton, was found yesterday in the Kalamazoo river at Battle Creek, Mich. She had disappeared on Friday night from a sanitarium in Battle Creek where she had been a patient following a nervous breakdown. Miss Russell was a daughter of the late Prof. J. B. Russell, for 25 years superintendent of Wheaton schools. Her mother, an invalid, survives.

HOLD UP 10 IN RESTAURANT.

SEE ROOSEVELT, SMITH HARMONY BEHIND LEHMAN

Compromise for New York Convention Outlook.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 2.—[Special.]—On the eve of the Democratic state convention, the picture was presented tonight of Franklin D. Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith working separately but toward the same end, the nomination of Herbert H. Lehman for governor.

After hours of conferences during the morning, afternoon and early evening, Tammany's bloc of delegates had not been won over, but neither had they been committed to the candidacy of Mayor John Boyd Thacher of Albany, candidate of the O'Connell brothers, the Albany leaders, and their friends in other up-state counties.

Governor Roosevelt, on his way here to address the delegates tomorrow evening at the second session of the convention, was in touch today by telephone with John H. McCooey national committeeman and Brooklyn leader. The governor again urged the selection of Colonel Lehman, but neither Mr. McCooey nor Tammany leader John F. Curry, to whom the governor's attitude had already been conveyed, committed himself to the Lehman candidacy.

Smith Himself Declines.

At one point, it was reported, a member of the O'Connell alliance asked Mr. Smith if he would not accept the nomination, adding that he would be acceptable to all concerned. Mr. Smith declined with thanks.

Mr. Smith holds, in the opinion of observers here, the key to the situation. He realizes, it is understood, that he owes a debt to Col. Lehman for the loyal friendship the latter gave him in several state campaigns, and in his national campaign in 1928.

He is slated to place Col. Lehman's name in nomination on the floor of the convention, but no word has come from him here as to whether he will do that if Tammany should decide to swing its votes in another direction.

Mr. Curry, Mr. McCooey and former Gov. Smith left the suite in which they had been closeted with the O'Connell brothers all afternoon, and rode together to the home of Representative Parker Corning on the outskirts of Albany. Mr. Corning said later that the visit was just a "friendly call."

Roosevelt Address Tonight.

Persons close to Mr. Curry indicated when the conferences got under way once more this evening that there seemed little likelihood of a decision tonight on the gubernatorial nomination, the decision to wait until late tomorrow night, after Gov. Roosevelt has arrived, addressed the delegates in the Albany armory, and conferred with city and up-state leaders.

Mr. Curry tonight revealed that both he and Mr. McCooey had been invited by Gov. Roosevelt to the executive mansion at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning, and that both had accepted. Mr. McCooey said that the conference had been arranged during Mr. McCooey's telephone conversation with the governor earlier in the day.

LEADERS VIEW WESTERN TRIP OF ROOSEVELT

Say Democrat Has Won Radicals.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 2.—[Special.]—Among Democratic leaders there is no end of discussion of the question whether Gov. Roosevelt made any votes by his journey through these states.

In the mountain and Pacific states the consensus appears to be that he did not; that all the votes he will get he had in the bag before he started. In the grain growing and stock raising states east of the mountains, however, most of the Democratic leaders with whom I came in contact were confident that the candidate had strengthened himself with the farmers by the vague panaceas for the ills of agriculture he suggested in his Topeka speech.

Viewed Trip as Needless.

It is an open secret that the western Democratic leaders counselled against the western trip. The reason they gave was that nothing but a blunder on the part of Roosevelt can prevent him from carrying almost every state west of the Mississippi. Not that Roosevelt was so well known or so popular with the westerners, but that Hoover is so unpopular. Poverty stricken farmers and the millions of unemployed in the cities were in the mood to vote the "ins" out and the "outs" in and——

The Democratic leaders thought it the part of wisdom to let well enough alone, let nature take its course and the depression do its work.

If the candidate were to make an extended swing round the circle, they argued, he would be inviting trouble. Every petty leader who failed to get his ear promptly, and keep it as long as he wanted to do so, would feel slighted, go away sore and proceed to sulk. Even the seating arrangement of the local leaders at the dinners given for the governor wherever he stopped would breed jealousies, as it turned out they did in some places. Only eternal watchfulness and care could prevent some such slight of a local political power as that of Hiram Johnson, which cost Hughes the electoral vote of California and the Presidency in 1916.

With the memory of this celebrated incident of the 1916 battle in mind the members of the Roosevelt party were on pins and needles throughout their stay in California. When the Roosevelt train was met at the northern border of the state there was a hurried survey of the reception committee. Missing was Isadore B. Dockweiler. Faces paled: had Dockweiler been slighted? With relief it was found that he had been invited, but living in Los Angeles was awaiting the arrival of the party in that part of the state.

Leaders Feel Better Now.

Several Democratic leaders in the northwest confided to me the relief with which they saw the Roosevelt party depart with no more damage than the injury of the feelings of some Democrat of negligible influence because of his failure to get a place at the speakers' table at the local dinner.

There were also not a few Democratic managers out this way who felt that by making the trip with the frequent stops and the close-up of the candidate that would be given to multitudes of people Gov. Roosevelt would leave impression of the serious physical infirmity of which he is the victim as the result of infantile paralysis. They feared the effect on the public mind of the sight of the governor being assisted up steps and lifting himself aboard the train hand over hand on the special ramp carried in the baggage car and brought forth at every stop. They were not so sure that sympathy for his condition and admiration of his heroic struggle against infirmity he has all but overcome, which are said to be exerting a potent influence, particularly with the women, would counterbalance misgivings that he is physically unequal to the discharge of the onerous duties of the Presidency.

Would Prove His Endurance.

The governor, however, insisted on making the trip for a number of reasons. Among them was the very reason that some sought to dissuade him—his infirmity. He wanted to show the people that he is not a wheelchair invalid, that he is capable of making the swing round the circle that is customarily made by the presidential candidate of the party out of power, and that he is, therefore, capable of meeting the no more onerous physical demands of the Presidency.

Another reason, in the opinion of many Democratic leaders, was the desire to give prominence to and dramatize the informal fusion that has been accomplished of the Democrats and radical self-styled progressive, Republicans through the territory of "the sons of the wild jackass," as George Moses dubbed them. Roosevelt's courting of the radical Republicans attracted much attention throughout his trip and culminated in his pilgrimage to McCook, Neb., to meet and appear on the same platform with their revered leader, Senator George W. Norris of that state.

Radicals Favor Roosevelt.

The outward manifestation of this alliance in the national progressive league, of which Senator Norris, representing the Republican left wing, is the chairman, and Senator E. P. Costigan of Colorado, representing the Democratic left wing, is vice chairman. Its object is to deliver the western radicals to Roosevelt to a man.

The line of cleavage in the west is much the same as that of 1924. Coolidge got all of the conservative Republican votes that Hoover will get next month and more. Roosevelt will get practically all of the radical vote that La Follette got in 1924 and nearly all the regular Democratic vote that Davis polled.

How Votes Were Divided.

Altogether there are 15 western states in which the radicals hold the balance of power and this time they are supporting the Democratic candidate. These states in which the combined Democratic and progressive vote either exceeded or nearly equaled the Republican vote in 1924 are the following:

	Republican.	Democrat and Progressive.
Idaho	69,879	78,416
Minnesota	420,759	395,185
Missouri	650,283	656,913
Montana	74,138	94,910
Nebraska	218,585	243,999
Nevada	11,243	15,678
New Mexico	54,745	58,085
North Dakota	94,931	103,780
Oregon	142,579	135,992
South Dakota	106,428	101,149
Utah	77,327	79,732
Washington	220,224	193,569
Wyoming	41,858	38,842
Wisconsin	311,614	521,774

The only eastern states outside the solid south in which Davis and La Follette polled more votes combined than Coolidge were Maryland, West Virginia, and Kentucky, all of which are likely to be carried by Roosevelt.

LA GRANGE GIRL DISAPPEARS; 3D IN TWO WEEKS

The disappearance of the third La Grange high school girl in two weeks was reported to police yesterday. Mrs. Grace Seward, 26 Pine avenue, La Grange Park, said her daughter, Virginia, 15 years old, has been missing since Friday night.

"She wanted to spend the night with a girl friend and I refused her permission," said Mrs. Seward. "She ran out of the house in a tantrum and has not returned." Leslie C. Seward, the father, is connected with the Reconstruction Finance corporation He returned yesterday from a trip.

The similar disappearance of Dora Hendrickson, 14 years old, of Plainfield and Brainerd avenues, La Grange, in her first year at the high school, and June Thompson, 15 years old, of 19 South Madison street, La Grange, a second year student, was reported two weeks ago.

A call at the Hendrickson home yesterday revealed that a letter postmarked Marion, Kas., had been received from the Thompson girl several days ago saying the girls had been hitch-hiking and intended going farther west.

MRS. ROOSEVELT RECALLS 8 YEARS IN WASHINGTON

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 2.—(AP)—Back in the days before the war, in the opinion of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, "the wife of an assistant secretary was the lowest form of animal life in Washington."

"I ought to know," she said today with a smile, "because I was one for eight years."

Some one asked Mrs. Roosevelt today what she would do, should Gov. Roosevelt be elected President, about her classes in the New York private school of which she is part owner. Ever since her husband became governor of New York, Mrs. Roosevelt has continued to teach her classes in history and civics three days each week.

"It is rather premature, I'm afraid, to discuss what I might do should we go to Washington," she replied. "But I am certain of this—that, no matter what happens, I shall always keep my interest in the school."

ROOSEVELT SAYS RELIGION BACKS HIS PHILOSOPHY

Quotes Great Churches on Wealth Concentration.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 2.—[Special.]—The radicalism of religion was argued here today by Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic candidate for the presidency.

Mr. Roosevelt presented another of his "nonpolitical" addresses before a large gathering in the new Naval armory, and in it he sought a new "scientific" treatment of poverty.

Decrying the systems which savored of the savage "survival of the fittest," the candidate said he stood for raising the lot of the "average" man. He added that he realized he had been attacked as a radical for espousing such views, and then he cited excerpts from three documents issued by Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish leaders vowing that each of them indorsed the principles he sought to advocate.

Concentration of Wealth.

The New York governor quoted and expressed comfort in the Protestant citation, which held concentration of wealth a "dangerous concentration of power," and which held the "present distribution of wealth and income" unbrotherly as a Christian concept, and unscientific.

One of the documents cited was an encyclical letter published last year by the pope, and Mr. Roosevelt, leading up to the quotation, said:

"Now I am going to read you a great declaration, and I wonder how many people will call it radical. It is just as radical as I am, a declaration from one of the greatest forces of conservatism in the world, the Catholic church.

"It is one of the greatest documents of modern times, and it says this:

"'It is patent in our days that not alone is wealth accumulated, but immense power and despotic economic domination are concentrated in the hands of a few, and that those few are frequently not the owners but only the trustees and directors of invested funds which they administer at their good pleasure.

"'This accumulation of power, the characteristic note of the modern economic order, is a natural result of limitless free competition, which permits the survival of those only who are strongest, which often means those who fight most relentlessly, who pay least heed to the dictates of conscience.'"

Citation from Church Council.

The Protestant citation given by Gov. Roosevelt was from the labor sermon sent out this year by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

"Hear how radical they are," the governor exclaimed. "They say:

"'It is not denied that many persons of wealth are rendering great service to society. It is only suggested that the wealthy are overpaid in sharp contrast with the underpaid masses of the people.

"'The concentration of wealth carries with it a dangerous concentration of power. It leads to conflict and violence. To suppress the symptoms of this inherent conflict while leaving the fundamental causes of it untouched is neither sound statesmanship nor Christian good will.

"'Economists now call attention to the fact that the present distribution of wealth and income, which is so unbrotherly in the light of Christian ethics, is also unscientific in that it does not furnish purchasing power to the masses to balance consumption and production in our machine age.'"

Quotes from Rabbi Israel.

Quoting then from a statement issued by Rabbi Edward L. Israel, chairman of the social justice commission of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, the governor read:

"'We talk of the stabilization of business. What we need is the stabilization of human justice and happiness and the permanent employment of economic policies which will enable us to preserve the essential human values of life amid all the changing aspects of the economic order.'"

At the outset of his "sermon" Candidate Roosevelt said there existed a conflict between two schools of philosophy, one of which would "let things alone," and the other that "strives for something new," and will attain social justice through "social action."

"The philosophy of 'letting things alone,'" Mr. Roosevelt continued, "has resulted in the days of the cave man and in the days of the automobile in the jungle law of the survival of the so-called fittest. But this philosophy of social action results in the protection of humanity and the fitting of as many human beings as possible into the scheme of surviving."

In the same way, the governor declared, there are two theories of prosperity and well being.

"First," he said, "the theory that if we make the rich richer, somehow they will let a part of their prosperity trickle through to the rest of us.

"And the second theory, and I suppose this goes back to the days of Noah—there was that second theory that if we make the average of mankind comfortable and secure their prosperity will rise upward just as yeast rises, up through the ranks."

"The problem of unemployment," said the governor at another point in his speech, "in the long run can be and shall be solved by the human race. Some leaders have wisely declared for a system of unemployment insurance throughout this broad land of ours, and we are going to come to it."

JAPAN IS TOLD IT HAS NO RIGHT TO MANCHURIA

League Report Condemns Occupation.

stopping arriving in Mukden undamaged, and on time.

"The military operation of the Japanese troops during that night cannot be regarded as measures of legitimate self-defense," the report continues. But it adds a passage that is somehow interpreted here as ironic:

"In saying this the commission does not exclude the hypothesis that officers on the spot may have thought they were acting in self-defense."

"Since Sept. 18, 1931, the activities of Japanese military authorities, in civil as well as military matters, were marked by essentially political considerations. It is clear that the independence movement, which never had been heard of in Manchuria before September, 1931, was made possible only by the presence of Japanese troops.

How Movement Was Conceived.

"A group of Japanese civil and military officials, both active and retired, who were in close touch with the new political movement in Japan, conceived, organized and carried through this movement as a solution to the situation in Manchuria as it existed after the events of Sept. 18.

"With this object they made use of the names and actions of certain Chinese individuals and took advantage of certain minorities among the inhabitants who had grievances against the former administration. It is also clear that the Japanese general staff realized from the start or at least in a short time the use which could be made of such autonomy."

The most effective factor, says the report, which contributed to the creation of Manchukuo and, without which it could not have been formed, was the presence of Japanese troops and the activities of Japanese officials, both civil and military.

"For this reason the present régime cannot be considered to have been called into existence by a genuine spontaneous independence movement," the document adds.

Forestalls Japanese Retort.

"Even if formal recognition of Manchukuo by Japan should take place before our report is considered by Geneva—an eventuality which we cannot ignore—we do not think our work will have been rendered valueless," says the commission, forestalling the obvious Japanese retort.

The report says that mere restoration of the status quo ante, which the Chinese have been demanding, would not be a solution. It fully elaborates upon the evils of the old régime in Manchuria.

"Since the present conflict arose out of conditions prevailing before September, 1931, to restore those conditions would be merely to invite a repetition of the trouble, the report states.

"Maintenance and recognition of the present régime in Manchuria would be equally unsatisfactory. Such a solution does not appear to be compatible with fundamental principles existing in international obligation nor with good understanding between the two countries upon which peace in the far east depends.

"It is opposed to the interests of China, it disregards the wishes of the people of Manchuria, and it is at least questionable whether it would ultimately serve the permanent interests of Japan.

An Autonomous Régime.

Establishment of a special autonomous régime for the three eastern provinces of China under the sovereignty of the central Chinese government is possible, the report declares, "if China and Japan could recognize the identity of their chief interests, and if they were willing to make those interests include the maintenance of peace and the establishment of cordial relations with each other."

"The final requisite for a satisfactory solution," the report goes on, "is temporary international coöperation in the internal reconstruction of China."

The document, emphasizing the fundamental interests and responsibility of foreign powers other than Japan, states:

"Any real, lasting solution by agreement must be compatible with the stipulations of existing multilateral treaties on which is based the peace organization of the world.

Must Help China.

"The considerations which actuated representatives of the powers at the Washington conference are still valid. It is quite as much in the interests of the powers now as it was in 1922 to assist in the reconstruction of China and the maintenance of her sovereignty, her territorial and administrative integrity, as indispensable to the maintenance of peace.

"Any disintegration of China might lead, perhaps rapidly, to serious international rivalries which would become all the more bitter if they should happen to coincide with rivalries between diverse social systems."

This apparently was a reference to the possibility of a conflict involving soviet Russia.

Soviet Interests Treated.

Soviet interests in Manchuria were then given their due.

"It is clear that any solution of the problem which ignored the soviets would risk a future breach and peace would not be permanent," the report reads.

The danger of communism in China is stressed. Japan's cue, says the report, if she is afraid of communism, is to put China on her feet. Japan needs the whole Chinese market, the investigators found.

They found, too, that the open door, the nine power treaty, as well as the covenant of the league and the Kellogg-Briand pact should be maintained.

Urges Open Door Policy.

"Maintenance of a real open door policy manifested by free competition in the fields of trade, investment, and finance would be to the interests of both Japan and China," the experts said.

Incidentally, the Chinese boycott, which, Japan contends, is really an act of war, was underlined as a dangerous and honorable weapon against which the only defense is friendship.

In this connection the report states:

"Our conclusion is that the Chinese boycotts are both popular and organized; that though they originate in and are supported by strong national sentiment, they are controlled and directed by organizations which can start or call them off, and that they are enforced by methods which certainly amount to intimidation. While many separate bodies are involved in the organization, the main controlling authority is the Kuomintang [ruling party]."

Discusses the Kuomintang.

The report then has this to say of Kuomintang:

"In this connection the question of relations between the government and the Kuomintang must be considered. Of the responsibility of the latter there can be no question. It is the controlling and coördinating organ behind the whole boycott movement. The Kuomintang may be the maker and master of the government, but to determine at what point the responsibility of the party ends and that of the government begins is a complicated problem of constitutional law on which the commission does not feel it proper to pronounce."

If the league turns out to be in a mood to coerce Japan, its case is ready. The report presents it as follows:

"It is a fact that without a declaration of war, an area, which was indisputably Chinese territory, has been forcibly seized and occupied by armed forces of Japan, and in consequence of this operation has been separated from and declared independent of the rest of China. The steps by which this was accomplished were claimed by Japan to have been consistent with the obligations of the covenant of the league, the Kellogg pact and the nine power treaty, all of which is designed to prevent action of this kind."

Self-Defense Plea Denied.

Japan's claim of justification of self-defense at Mukden was rejected. The independence of Manchukuo as representing the popular will was refuted.

"We have tried to provide sufficient material to enable the league to settle the dispute consistent with the honor, dignity and national interests of both contending parties," the commission said.

But Chinese sovereignty above all is to be respected. When the question of foreign advisers for autonomous Manchuria was mentioned, it was stated that they must be selected "in a manner acceptable to the Chinese government and consistent with the sovereignty of China."

Ten Principles Cited.

A satisfactory solution for permanent peace must conform to the following ten principles, the report said:

1. Compatibility with interests of both China and Japan.
2. Consideration of the interests of Russia.
3. Conformity with the league covenant, the Briand-Kellogg pact, and the nine power treaty.
4. Recognition of Japan's interests in Manchuria.
5. Establishment of new treaty relations between China and Japan.
6. Effective provision for settlement of future disputes.
7. Manchurian autonomy.
8. Internal security against external aggression.
9. Encouragement of economic rapprochement between China and Japan.
10. International coöperation in Chinese reconstruction.

Witnesses Frightened Away.

The report revealed that the commission had difficulty in discovering the real attitude of the inhabitants of Manchuria toward the Manchukuo régime.

"The Japanese gave the commission a strong protective guard, which frightened away witnesses," the report said. "Interviews usually were arranged with considerable difficulty and in secrecy and many informed us that it was too dangerous for them to meet us even in this way."

The commission received 1,550 letters from farmers, tradesmen, students, and workers in the towns which were analyzed by their experts.

"All these 1,550 letters except two were bitterly hostile to the new 'Manchukuo government and to the Japanese," says the report. "They appeared to be sincere and spontaneous expressions of opinion."

"Our Work Is Finished."

"Our work is finished," concludes the report. "Manchuria for a year past has been given over to strife and turmoil. The population of a large, fertile and rich country has been subjected to conditions of distress which probably were never experienced before. The relations of China and Japan were those of war in disguise and the future is full of anxiety.

"We have reported the circumstances which created these conditions. Every one is fully aware of the gravity of the problem which confronts the league and the difficulties of solution. The solution, if promptly and effectively applied would solve the Manchurian question in the best interests of China, Japan and humanity in general."

The Chinese here said the only difficulty in the proposed solution would appear to be direct negotiations, but Japan in accepting the principle of negotiations necessarily would have to accept the principles of the report.

"The report is concise in form and absolutely clear in implications," said Quo Tai-chi, Chinese minister to London, tonight. "We believe the equity of our case as hitherto maintained is clearly vindicated. It is now before the league."

U. S. OFFICIALS VIEW LYTTON REPORT WITH FAVOR; BACKS POLICY

Washington, D. C., Oct. 3.—(AP)—Officials in Washington were favorably impressed tonight by the Lytton commission's report on Manchuria. Secretary of State Stimson was out of the city when the document was made public, however. He will have a chance to study the voluminous report tomorrow.

The report was said in official circles to be regarded as a document which supports the Hoover-Stimson policy of not recognizing gains made by aggression. The manner in which the report was framed was commented on in diplomatic quarters together with the definiteness of the plan suggested to the league of nations for the purpose of bringing the Japanese and Chinese governments into conference in the hope that they might agree for settlement of their difficulties.

Absolute secrecy surrounded receipt and care of the copy of the 100,000 word report, which lay sealed in a safe at the state department until 7 o'clock this morning. Then, the document was broken open by Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck, chief of the far eastern division of the state department, in the presence of a group of newspapermen and state department employes.

JAPANESE ARMY AND NAVY DEMAND EXTRA $96,000,000 IN BUDGETS

TOKIO, Japan, Oct. 3.—(AP)—The army and navy have submitted preliminary estimates for their 1933-'34 budgets, setting forth demands for extra appropriations of $48,000,000 each. These fresh appropriations were asked in addition to the ordinary general expenditure, but are subject to pruning by the finance ministry and the cabinet.

The navy's total estimate was placed at more than ¥130,000,000, including ¥86,480,000 in new items. Nearly ¥14,000,000 was assigned for expanding and maintaining naval aviation and ¥19,000,000 to maintenance of new vessels. About ¥8,640,000 was asked for warship construction.

The army asked ¥24,000,000 for new arms and munitions; ¥36,000,000 for operations in Manchuria; ¥45,000,000 for ordinary general expenditures. Although such preliminary estimates usually are drastically trimmed, army and navy leaders today indicated they were determined to stick to their demands owing to the difficult international situation.

BODY OF GANG VICTIM FOUND IN WISCONSIN FIELD

The body of a man believed to be a Chicago gang victim was found yesterday in a field on the Hoeffner farm, not far from Burlington, Wis., near the Kenosha county line. The victim had been shot ten or twelve times in the head and chest. There were powder burns on the hair and clothes, indicating that all the shots had been fired at close range.

The victim's suit and topcoat contained labels showing they had been purchased, Benjamin Lamm of 3315 ing company, 1159 Milwaukee avenue, in this city. A bill from Lamm Brothers for $105 and marked "paid in full" was found in the clothing, but there was nothing on it to identify the purchaser. Benjamin Lamb of 3315 Palmer street, a member of the firm, said he had no way of identifying the purchaser. The bill bore the number 7499.

The slain man was described as 5 feet 7 inches tall, with black curly hair, brown eyes, swarthy complexion, and weighing about 170 pounds. He had a tattoo mark between the right wrist and elbow and was dressed in a dark gray suit and light hat. In the pockets were $30 in bills, a 17 jewel Elgin watch which was still running, and a card of the American Motor association, 100 North La Salle street, Chicago. A silver belt buckle bore the letter "J."

Police said that the man had been dead about 12 hours when the body was found by a group of nut pickers.

DANDRUFF
A Sure Way to End It

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get plain, ordinary liquid Arvon from any drug store (it won't cost you more than thirty-five cents), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

JAPAN REFUSES TO LET LEAGUE 'DICTATE' TO HER

Says She Will Not Alter Policy in Manchuria.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Oct. 3 [Monday].—Military, diplomatic circles, and the newspapers this morning express great indignation over the "unfairness" of the Lytton report on Manchuria. All quarters declare that Japan must resign from the league unless reconsideration is made. Editorial comments, severely critical, point out that the report is altogether unacceptable.

The document was a remarkable approximation of forecasts by Japanese leaders. However, it lacked the conclusion which had been predicted declaring the report modified in the event that Japan recognized Manchukuo. Only a vague reference to this was made.

The foreign office through a spokesman last night asserted that "Stimson must be mightily pleased" with the report's aspersions that Japan infringed on the nine-power treaty and Kellogg pact, but that Japan is very much displeased.

Denies Creating Manchukuo.

The spokesman further denounced the accusation that Japanese officials created the state of Manchukuo under the direction and support of the army staff as extremely prejudiced, and that the commission made it "without even trying to establish the truth of its assertions."

"Neither the open door nor the nine-power pact can secure peace in the far east," the foreign office announced. "Nothing short of a Japanese Monroe doctrine will suffice in the orient. Extension of our influence in Manchuria is one step toward that goal.

"It is not a question of material gains and losses. We are not going to annex Manchuria, but even if we did trade would not suffer. American trade has nothing whatever to do with the status of Manchuria, which is irrevocably settled as far as Japan is concerned.

"Japan has maintained the policy of the open door in her own territory, and there is no reason to expect that the open door policy will not be maintained wherever Japanese influence extends.

"Unfair to Japan."

"The report contains much which is unfair to Japan, but nothing which is unfair to China. Although there is much which is unpleasant for the Chinese to read, there is nothing that they do not deserve. There is no reason for Japan to acknowledge these proposals unless the league attempts to act upon them."

"We cannot brook for a moment the league's having anything to say about the future of Manchuria. We did not expect any concrete plan, but anything the league does now will not alter Japan's course. The only ground for negotiations in the future will be direct relations with China."

The foreign office spokesman said the report was one-sided in skimming over everything except Manchuria. The commission's "ambitious and unauthorized proposals" for settling Manchuria's affairs are clear evidence that it misapprehended the scope of its own functions, he said.

The spokesman concluded by hinting that the army is certain to demand Japan's withdrawal from the league as a result of the charge of "progressive military occupation."

Chinese Approve Report.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Oct. 2.—The Chinese government tonight issued a 20,000 word summary of the 100,000 word Lytton commission's report and recommendations on Manchuria.

Chiang Kai-shek and other high officials of the Chinese government refused to comment on the report.

Chinese officials in Shanghai expressed the opinion that while not approving the report entirely, they generally approve of the commission's recommendations, especially that a settlement must conform to the provisions of the nine power treaty, the Kellogg pact and the league covenant.

With reference to the Mukden incident on Sept. 18, 1931, which precipitated the Japanese intervention, the report confirmed the statement, which appeared exclusively in THE TRIBUNE that the Chinese had no intention of attacking the Japanese, that the explosion on the South Manchuria railway tracks did not cause sufficient damage to interrupt regular traffic and did not justify the Japanese military activities.

SEIZES ALLEGED WINDOW BREAKER.

Joseph Hazen, formerly of Youngstown, O., was captured yesterday at La Salle and Madison streets by John K. Moore, a Pinkerton watchman, after he is alleged to have hurled a stone through a tea shop window at 170 West Monroe street.

MANCHURIA—A LAND OF DYNAMITE

Manchuria looms large today in the world's eyes. The report of the league of nations commission, made public yesterday, indicated plainly the vast amount of international dynamite which is packed in this frontier country of the orient.

The commission was sent to investigate the Japanese military occupation of Manchuria and the creation of the independent state of Manchukuo under Japanese protection last fall and winter. The league acted on the plea of China, whose army was driven out of Manchuria by the Japanese.

Manchuria first impressed itself on the world in the seventeenth century when the great Manchu prince, Nuhatsi, established his power over Manchuria, all China, and Mongolia, and levied tribute as far south as the Malay Archipelago. That dynasty lasted until 1911. The new chief executive of Manchukuo is the last of the line of Manchu kings, Henry Pu-Yi, the former boy emperor of China.

The western world, seeking economic and political advantages carved out "spherese of influence" in weakened China during the nineteenth century. After various "spheres of influence" had been seized, China fought wars with Japan and Russia. Out of them and the Russo-Japanese war was born the territory that is the Manchuria of today.

China was possibly saved from partition through "spheres of influence" by the famous "open-door policy" of the American secretary of state, John Hay. In 1922 the Washington conference ended the "sphere of influence" idea once and for all, but meanwhile Japan had obtained a predominant position in south Manchuria and in eastern Mongolia.

Aside from the potential wealth of Manchuria, there are three geographical features that make this territory the key to vast reaches of inner Asia.

First, the Amur river, that separates Manchuria from Russia on the north, leaves Manchuria especially vulnerable to invasion from that direction.

Second, the ports of Dairen and Port Arthur, at the end of the southern Liaotung peninsula of Manchuria, are the only all-year open water ports available to Russia and inner Mongolia. This explains the complicated railway struggle in Manchuria.

Third, the Liaotung peninsula affords the most accessible corridor from the east and north into the great central plain of China. This narrow strip of lowland is guarded by Shanhaikwan, the gateway between the mountains and the sea where the great wall comes down to the gulf of Liaotung.

GERMANS HONOR HINDENBURG ON 85TH BIRTHDAY

President Wears Uniform of War Days.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 2.—Wearing the gala uniform of his world war days and carrying the baton of a field marshal, President Paul von Hindenburg today celebrated his 85th birthday, first with military ceremonies and then in the circle of his family.

At 7 a. m. the Berlin guard of honor started the day with a reveille, marching through the city to the temporary presidential palace. The band played and flags were unfurled on the official buildings.

At 10 o'clock Von Hindenburg, accompanied by his son, Minister of Defense Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, and other high officials attended church services. Moderate sized crowds lined the street to cheer the president later as he was driven to the monument for the war dead, where he deposited a wreath.

"Goose Step" for President.

The guard of honor then brought the nine flags of the field marshal's former regiment to Von Hindenburg's study, where they will remain until tomorrow. The guard "goose stepped" past the president at the palace, with the crowd cheering Von Hindenburg and the troops. All sang "Duetschland Ueber Alles" while Von Hindenburg listened with bowed head.

At noon Von Hindenburg received several officials and diplomats and then withdrew to spend the rest of the day with his children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren.

Most Germans today paid tribute to Von Hindenburg as "the last pillar who saved the nation from utter collapse," but it also seized the opportunity of showering appeals on the president. Republicans implored him to protect the Republican constitution, while others advised him to strengthen the Von Papen dictatorship or help to reëstablish the monarchy.

In honor of Von Hindenburg's birthday many officers of the reichswehr and navy were promoted.

While Von Hindenburg's followers were cheering him in the center of Berlin, Adolph Hitler called together the youth of his National Socialist party and reviewed a parade of 90,000 boys and girls.

Hoover Sends Greetings.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 2.—(AP)—President Hoover today sent birthday congratulations to President Von Hindenburg of Germany. The message said:

"On this 85th anniversary of your excellency's birthday, I send you my cordial felicitations. May your future have in store for a you a long continuation of good health and happiness."

CHINESE STIRRED BY POISONING OF WAR LORD CHANG

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Oct. 2.—The report from Tokio stating that Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, who was ousted as Manchuria's war lord by the Japanese was poisoned while at dinner Saturday night in Peiping produced intense excitement here. Chinese reports claimed it was an attempt to assassinate the former Mukden marshal, who is said to be in a critical condition. Complete censorship pravails at Peiping.

SOVIET LAUDS 2 BOYS SLAIN FOR EXPOSING FATHER AND KULAKS

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Oct. 2.—(AP)—From the little village of Gerasimovka, in the Ural mountains, comes the story of the slaying of two young brothers who informed on their own father for counter revolutionary acts as president of the village soviet and revealed the activities of a Kulak [independent farmer] gang.

The newspaper Pioneer Pravda published pictures today of the boys, Pavil and Feodor Morozov, 14 and 9 years old, respectively, leaders of the village organization of "young pioneers" who were reported set upon and stabbed as they were returning home from the forest. The newspaper said the children ferreted out "class enemies" and revealed them to authorities in a manner which would have done credit to trained grown-up sleuths.

The boys were reported threatened with death, but the newspaper said this only increased their activities in behalf of the state. Nine Kulaks were arrested after the children were slain. The Kulaks are being tried now and the paper said "pioneers," school children, workers, and peasants all over the Ural region have petitioned the court demanding the death penalty. The newspaper did not disclose what happened to the boy's father.

P. T. A. CONGRESS BACKS DRIVE TO SELL WARRANTS

Full indorsement of the tax anticipation warrant sales campaign of the Men Teachers' union was given yesterday by the Illinois Congress of parent-teacher organizations, of which Mrs. Holland Flagler is president. The campaign aims to build up the value of the 1931 board of education warrants, and is under the direction of Hershel Scott, vice president of the union.

An all-Chicago parent-teacher committee has been appointed to arrange active coöperation in the campaign. Mrs. Thomas B. Stephenson and Mrs. John J. Oros, directors of parent-teacher districts on the south and north sides respectively, which embrace nearly 200 schools, will head the committee.

Arrangements are being made to engage speakers to appear before parent-teacher local units throughout the city to bring the value of the campaign home to the mothers and fathers.

"It is a constructive approach to the problem of building up public confidence and the credit of the tax levying bodies of the city," said Mrs. Flagler. "It is only logical to feel that any building up of credit will help to clear up the unpaid salary situation, which is so serious."

Mr. Scott said that a point being stressed with taxpayers was that they could save from 5 to 30 per cent on portions of their 1931 bills by purchasing warrants at their present low levels. "Public appreciation of the merit of the warrants will bring buying that will naturally increase the price," he added, "and will react to the benefit of teachers who have accepted warrants in payment of part of their 1931 salaries."

FOUR DIE WHEN PLANE CRASHES IN CONNECTICUT

Pilot and 3 Passengers Meet Sudden Death.

North Haven, Conn., Oct. 2.—[Special.]—Three young men and a young woman met their deaths here late this afternoon when a Stinson Junior monoplane, said to belong to the Petro-Sol corporation, went into a nose dive. The pilot, George A. Smith of East Haven, his brother, Lester Smith, and Mrs. Beatie Russner, were killed instantly. John A. Hood, brother of Mrs. Russner, died on the way to a hospital.

The crash occurred on the edge of a pasture, close to a heavily thicketed plot of woods, which the plane barely missed in its nose dive descent.

The spot was but a half mile south of the North Haven airport, from where the party had taken off. The tragedy occurred in full view of hundreds of onlookers along the Boston Post road who noted by the sound of the motor that the plane was apparently having trouble and then suddenly they were shocked by the sight of the plane diving to disaster.

The plane hit the ground with such force that it jammed the engine back into the pilot house, killing Smith, the pilot, instantly. Rescuers arriving at the scene found all four still in the wrecked plane. Lester Smith and Mrs. Russner were taken from the plane, but died shortly afterward.

The identity of John Hood was not learned for some little time after the accident. When taken from the plane he appeared to be the only one with a chance for life. He was rushed to the Grace hospital, but died before emergency aid could be given him.

Cleveland, O., Oct. 2.—(AP)—The Plain Dealer says today William Randolph Hearst, publisher, is in the Cleveland Clinic hospital. Employés of the clinic stated that Hearst occupied a room there, but that orders had been given not to divulge information concerning his presence, the paper said. Dr. George W. Crile, head of the clinic, declined to discuss a report that Hearst had come here for general observation.

It is rumored here that the purpose is to see King George in view of recent insults heaped on the governor by Free State officials and the termination of MacNeill's appointment in the near future. However the governor's office states that the visit is purely private and that later he is going to France for a vacation.

ASK PUBLIC FOR $7,500,000 TO HELP THE NEEDY

Fund to Aid Infants, Aged and Infirm.

A campaign to raise $7,500,000 necessary to carry on relief work other than unemployment relief of Cook county's 130 established relief and welfare agencies this year will get under way at a meeting of the organization committee of the Joint Emergency Relief Fund this morning at the fund's headquarters in the Otis building.

E. L. RYERSON JR.

The committee is expected to recommend a complete abandoning of the Joint Emergency Relief Fund identity, under which last year's campaign was conducted, in order to avoid a confusion of names and purposes, and an entirely new organization is expected to be created, relief officials said. Officers of the new group will include many of those who served on the former organization, but Edward L. Ryerson Jr., the president, will resign to devote his time to the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission, of which he is chairman.

Name Committees Today.

Committees to handle the actual work of raising funds will be appointed at today's meeting in order that results may be obtained in time to be presented to the Reconstruction Finance corporation at Washington, which will base its commitments to Illinois unemployment relief in part on the success of local efforts to meet the situation.

The relief work to be supported by the $7,500,000 fund includes free hospitalization, free clinics, child care, care of the aged, and family relief where the need is complicated by sickness and other problems apart from simple unemployment. While not of the magnitude of the unemployment relief problem, Mr. Ryerson considers such relief an equal and vital need.

"It is of utmost importance that we take care of the jobless man and woman—that we see they are fed and sheltered, particularly during the winter," Mr. Ryerson said. "But all our unemployment relief goes for naught if while state and federal funds are caring for this, one child dies in Cook county because of insufficient funds to supply it milk or food or medicine, or one sick man or woman has to be turned from a hospital door.

Seek Aid of All Citizens.

"The question of whether this vital welfare work can go on will be placed squarely up to every person in Cook county. All our relief agencies have pared their budgets as far as possible. All have seen demands upon them increase from five to ten fold in the last few years. All look to this coming campaign for funds to carry on.

"And in the meantime the eyes of those to whom we must look for state and federal aid for our more extensive problem of unemployment relief are on our efforts here. Without their help we are powerless and the whole structure of relief collapses. We realize the burden every one in Cook county is carrying, but we cannot believe these funds will not be available."

TWO HIT AND RUN CARS STRIKE AND KILL PEDESTRIAN

An unidentified man, about 50 years old, was struck and killed by two hit and run cars this morning. He was crossing Halsted street at 45th street when a northbound automobile, traveling at a high rate of speed, knocked him in front of a southbound car, which also hit him. Neither car stopped. The body was taken to the county morgue.

Louis Levine, 48 years old of Marquette, Mich., died last night in St. Francis hospital, Evanston, of injuries which he suffered early Friday when his automobile ran into an abutment in McCormick road, near Oakton street, Evanston. Police said that the road at that point is wide. Levine's widow, Louise, is expected to testify at the inquest today. Levine, who was a real estate dealer, came to Chicago with his wife two weeks ago on a business trip. They had been staying at the Congress hotel.

Charles B. Travis, 59 years old, a Negro, 3337 South State street, died in the county hospital yesterday of injuries suffered Sept. 19 when he was struck by a truck driven by Arthur Kelly, 7731 Dobson avenue.

CASUAL BURNED TO DEATH.

An unidentified Negro about 50 years old burned to death early yesterday in a fire in the basement of a building at 4833 South Michigan avenue. He is believed to have been a casual who sought shelter for the night and started the fire by smoking cigarets.

BLAME BUSY DAY FOR LOW TOTAL OF REGISTRATIONS

Politicians Predict Big Turnout Oct. 11.

Lack of heavy registration on Saturday—the first opportunity for voters to get on the poll books for the Nov. 8 election—was explained by politicians of both parties in about the same way yesterday.

"There was too much going on," said County Judge Jarecki when he was informed that only 761,238 men and women had enrolled themselves; and both Republican and Democratic leaders took the same position.

Figures Far Below Forecasts.

The day's total not only fell far below the forecasts from various sources that 900,000 or even 950,000 voters would go to the polling places, but it was 325,000 less than the total for the corresponding day four years ago. On Sept. 29, 1928, the day's registration in Chicago was 886,682.

There is to be a second registration day—on Oct. 11, a week from tomorrow—and the politicos are still confident that the number qualified to vote on Nov. 8 will at least equal the 1,385,642 that were left on the books after revision following the two registration days four years ago, and they believe that total is almost certain to be exceeded.

They are less confident that the total on the books for the April primaries this year—1,429,778—will be tied. That figure was made up by successive supplemental registrations following the general registration of 1928, and is believed to have included thousands of names that should have been stricken.

"Voters Just Too Busy."

"Most of the voters were just too busy to go to the polls yesterday and deferred registration until the next time," it was said at the offices of the election commission.

"In the first place, yesterday was Saturday, with beautiful weather appealing to everybody to get out of doors for the half holiday. Then there was the world series game. Several times as many as saw the game dashed home to listen to it over the radio. Then, for the Democrats, there was the Roosevelt demonstration, in which many of the precinct workers took part.

"And another important fact was that Jewish voters were observing their ecclesiastical New Year's—Rosh Hashanah—and therefore remained away from the registration places."

FATHER DE LANGE OF TECHNY CALLED TO POST IN ROME

The Rev. Francis De Lange, widely known member of the Society of the Divine Word, Techny, has been called to Rome to become consultor on the general board of the order. This was announced yesterday by the father superior of the American headquarters of the order at Techny. Father De Lange will be stationed at Rome with the superior general of the world-wide order.

FATHER DE LANGE.

Father De Lange was one of the first members of the order to come to America. He was the regional superior of the American province in 1912 and was then sent to islands in the Dutch East Indies. In his 10 years there Father De Lange baptized more than 10,000 persons. He was appointed bishop of a district there but declined to accept the honor.

Following his return to America Father De Lange has held various offices in the society, having been prefect, rector, procurator and superior of the American province.

4 MORE COWBOYS ARE INJURED IN RODEO CONTESTS

Four more cowboys were injured yesterday in the contests at the second annual world's championship rodeo at the Chicago Stadium. They were Eddie Bolton of Helena, Mont., James Humphrey of Blunt, S. D., and Les Karstad of Brunning, Mont. All were hurt in the cowboy's broncho riding contest. Fred Alvord of Baird, Tex., fractured a knee in the steer wrestling event.

Rudy Franke of Denver, who was injured Saturday, was placed in a plaster cast yesterday. The condition of Marvin Kelly, whose skull was fractured Friday night, still remains serious at the West Side hospital. He has not regained consciousness.

Col. W. T. Johnson, the producer, yesterday ordered prices reduced for the remaining nine performances. The rodeo closes next Sunday night, Oct. 9.

PERSONALTY TAX SURVEY OF FILM THEATERS ENDED

Movie Houses Are Divided Into Four Classes.

H. Gordon Bollman, chief of the personal property division under County Assessor J. L. Jacobs, yesterday completed a survey of motion picture theaters in the county. The theaters are divided into four classes for assessing purposes. The full cash value of the theaters' personalty is to be determined by the values of their seats.

Seats in class A theaters are valued at $10, in class B theaters at $8, in class C at $6, and in class D $4. The equalization factor of 27 per cent of the full value is applied to the value of the total number of seats to determine the assessed valuation.

The survey is for the guidance of deputy assessors. It is said that it will put the personal property of the theaters on an equitable taxing basis for the first time in 30 years.

CLASS A.

Theater.	Seats.	Theater.	Seats.

GUARDED AFTER DEATH THREATS, $6,000 DEMAND

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 2.—[Special.]—State police and private detectives are guarding the home of Lee Hickox, 70, wealthy retired farmer and owner of city property, who recently received a letter demanding payment of $6,000 under threats of death.

The letter was mailed here and demanded that the money in $10 and $20 bills be left at a designated spot on the Hickox farm. Hickox reported the matter to authorities and T. P. Sullivan, chief of the state bureau of criminal identification, state highway police and private detectives placed a decoy package as directed and vainly waited several hours for the extortionists to appear.

Hickox went to a local bank yesterday and came out with a box which contained only paper. This was taken to the designated spot while policemen stood guard. Chief Sullivan does not believe that the threat came from an organized gang. Neither does he believe it a hoax.

SWANSON SPEEDS WORK ON APPEAL IN CANAL CASE

Six Assistants Will Go Over Huge Record.

State's Attorney Swanson announced yesterday that he had assigned six assistant prosecutors to devote their entire time to preparing the appeal papers in the sanitary district graft case in which Timothy J. Crowe, former president of the district during the whoopee era, and three others were convicted and sentenced to jail. The record in this case contains thousands of pages of testimony and exhibits and when bound in volumes stands more than six feet high.

The prosecutor is taking no chances on the outcome of the election, one of his assistants said, in explaining the unusual activity on the various cases which are due for appeal. It is his desire to get the records in all important pending cases actually filed in the reviewing courts before his term of office expires Dec. 5.

Must Compare Records.

The appeal record in the graft conviction case was presented several weeks ago by the defense attorneys. It is now the duty of the prosecutor to go over this huge document and make sure that it is a correct transcript of what occurred during the trial. The record is then certified by the trial judge and filed in the appeal court.

If Prosecutor Swanson should fail of re-election the work of carrying on the appeal would fall to his Democratic opponent, Thomas J. Courtney. The defendants convicted in the case were all, with one exception, prominent figures in the Democratic party. Crowe was at one time considered the head of the party.

Another case in which rush orders have been issued is that of the Bain bank crash. John J. Bain, head of the string of banks, is under sentence of 1 to 5 years in the penitentiary for conspiracy the same as Crowe in the graft case.

New Arraignment Tomorrow.

Bain, his son, his son-in-law and another defendant, are scheduled to appear before Chief Justice John Prystalski of the Criminal court for arraignment tomorrow on the new charges brought against them last week by the grand jury. The prosecutor announced that he would also make every effort possible to have this case disposed of prior to the election.

TRIBUNE COOKING SCHOOL OF 1932 TO OPEN OCT. 25

Sessions Will Be Held on Three Sides of City.

BY MARY MEADE.

When 100,000 Chicago women want a thing, they get it. Last year, at the close of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE School of Cookery, unanimously voted the most successful enterprise of its kind ever held in Chicago or ever sponsored by any newspaper, thousands of women cheered the proposal of a like school for 1932.

In response to this demand, the second annual TRIBUNE School of Cookery will open its doors on Oct. 25 with a promise of an even finer program of culinary instruction, musical and dramatic entertainment, and free gift offers than that which was enjoyed last year by cooking school guests.

Mrs. Ida M. Chitwood, nationally known home economics authority, whose captivating personality and outstanding ability won her so many followers in 1931, again will conduct the school in cooperation with Mary Meade, THE TRIBUNE cooking editor.

Makes Cookery an Adventure.

Mrs. Chitwood has an enviable record of more than 270 successful cooking schools conducted throughout the United States. This background, together with degrees from the Boston School of Cookery and the George Peabody school of Nashville, leave her admirably equipped to bring to Chicago housewives the most up-to-date, practical, and scientific methods of food preparation, while her own contagious friendliness makes a new and fascinating adventure out of each succeeding session.

This year Mrs. Chitwood promises to bring with her a full bag of new tricks—time saving and economy hints—in addition to her ever increasing répertoire of appetizing recipes. Her demonstrations will illustrate improved methods for preparing simple foods as well as the creation of unique company specials.

Recipes from every corner of this country as well as from the kitchens of England, Germany, Italy, France, Mexico, China, and Scandinavia will be explained by Mrs. Chitwood during the three weeks' duration of the cooking school.

Valuable Prizes Offered.

A second attractive feature—one which followers of last year's TRIBUNE Cooking school will remember pleasantly—again will be offered in the form of hundreds of dollars' worth of valuable prizes. Gifts of food, kitchen equipment, and household articles will be made every day of the cooking school, with one grand equipment prize featuring the close of each week. Expert judges have chosen these gifts, carefully considering the needs and desires of Chicago women.

In addition to delving into cookery secrets with Mrs. Chitwood and acquiring their share of the prizes of the day, women attending THE TRIBUNE school will be entertained by radio, theater, and opera stars who will open each day's program and also appear during the afternoon intermissions.

Many of these artists, according to Phil Maxwell, master of ceremonies at the Cooking school, appeared with Mrs. Chitwood in last year's sessions and have generously consented to return again this year. Community singing, led by trained and enthusiastic choral leaders, also will be a feature of each program.

School in Three Divisions.

In order that the school may be convenient for all Chicago women, it has been separated into three divisions covering the three sides of the city. Each division will have four consecutive afternoon sessions. To accommodate the thousands who attend each meeting, three of the city's largest indoor ballrooms have been engaged and supplied with raised stages and excellent lighting and public address systems.

On four consecutive afternoons, starting Tuesday, Oct. 25, housewives of the south side will gather at the Trianon ballroom, 6201 Cottage Grove avenue. On four consecutive afternoons, starting Tuesday, Nov. 1, women of the west side will meet in Guyon's Parr dise ballroom, 4000 Washington boulevard. The following week on four consecutive afternoons, starting Tuesday, Nov. 8, the women of the north side will pack the Aragon ballroom, 1100 Lawrence avenue.

At each of the twelve sessions the doors will be opened at least one hour before the school begins and will be closed once the cooking lesson has started in order to avoid disturbing those already seated. Each session will start promptly at 1 p. m.

Husbands May Attend.

Husbands are allowed—even encouraged—for a cookery conscious assistant is often invaluable in times of household stress. No two of the twelve cooking sessions will be alike, so women are urged to attend as many as they find convenient in other parts of the city as well as in their own.

FRIENDS AID G.A.R. IN FIGHT TO KEEP PARADE CONTROL

Attack New Memorial Day Ordinance.

The 33d Division War Veterans' association and members of the city council have joined forces with the Grand Army of the Republic in a move to preserve for the veterans of the civil war the right to direct arrangements for the annual observance of Memorial day.

This traditional right is challenged in an ordinance which was drafted by the city law office at the request of Roy D. Keehn, major general of militia. Under this ordinance the arrangements for the Memorial day parade would be in control of civilians. The ordinance has not yet been submitted to the city council for action.

Call Proposal Insult.

In a resolution the 33d Division War Veterans' association has gone on record as opposing any change in the present method of observing Memorial day in these words:

"The 33d Division War Veterans' association deems that it would be an insult to the veterans of the civil war, in view of the fact that there are only a small number of those men still alive, to take away from them the right to direct the honoring of the dead war veterans on Memorial day."

A number of aldermen, among them veterans of the world war, also expressed the opinion that the G. A. R., as the founders and senior body of the parade, is entitled to continue in control of the activities for the observance of Memorial day.

"I'm in favor of letting the civil war veterans continue to handle the parade arrangements," said Ald. B. A. Cronson [4th]. "I understand that the activities for the observance of Memorial day were inaugurated by them nearly fifty years ago, and I see no reason for taking control of the observances out of their hands."

Recall Past Successes.

Ald. William A. Rowan [10th] declared that he believes it would be a mistake to take away from the G. A. R. its traditional right to have charge of the parade. He pointed out that the G. A. R. has handled the parade successfully in the past.

Allied with the civil war veterans in the Grand Army of the Republic Memorial Association of Cook County are the following organizations: United Spanish War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, American Legion, and Disabled Veterans of the World War and their auxiliaries.

BUNDESEN CITES CITY RULES FOR APARTMENT HEAT

With the opening of the official heating season Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, calls to the attention of landlords the requirements of city ordinances on this subject. Under the ordinances the landlords must provide until June 1 a minimum temperature of 60 degrees at 6:30 a. m., 65 degrees at 7:30 a. m., and 68 degrees at 8:30 a. m. and thereafter until 10:30 p. m. There are no requirements in the ordinances for the period between 10:30 p. m. and 6:30 a. m.

"Consideration will be shown to landlords who are short of funds because of nonpayment of rent by tenants," said Dr. Bundesen.

CREW DEMANDS PAY FOR OCEAN TREASURE HUNT

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 2.—[Special.]—Unless Capt. H. L. Bowdoin, head of an expedition seeking to recover about $6,000,000 from the sunken steamer Merida, can pay off the crew of the salvage steamer Salvor by Wednesday, they will refuse to go out to a point 60 miles off the Virginia capes to continue the treasure hunt, the men said today.

The Salvor and the trawlers Sea Gull and Sea Rambler, have been engaged for two months in efforts to recover the treasure on the Merida, sunk 21 years ago after she was rammed by the American steamer Admiral Farragut. The Merida, according to Capt. Bowdoin, has gold, silver bullion and undetermined wealth in money and jewels on board.

Carl Demarult of New York, who has put up most of the money to finance the venture, threw up the sponge yesterday and returned home. Hans B. Goeffner, whose aunt also put up money, returned to his home in Brooklyn. Both claimed Capt. Bowdoin was not following the plans agreed upon before the expedition began.

Bowdoin says the treasure on the Merida is within reach but his crew has broken faith with him. He says with the aid of a diving bell, his own invention, the treasure can be recovered with little difficulty if the work is continued. A hole five feet in diameter has been made in the side of the ship, Bowdoin claims, but his crew demands an opening 20 feet in diameter before they will attempt to explore the wreck, he said.

Memorial Church

Cardinal Mundelein yesterday dedicated the new $500,000 Church of Perpetual Adoration of the Benedictine convent at Mundelein. The new church is an addition to the convent which was established near St. Mary of the Lake seminary in 1928 at the request of Cardinal Mundelein. It will constitute a perpetual memorial of the 28th International Eucharistic congress.

The public will have access to the church at all times for devotions. The two altars were consecrated last night at 6 o'clock. A luncheon was served to the benefactors of the church following the ceremonies in the morning.

INQUIRY REVEALS ALIENS POSING AS U. S. CITIZENS

The federal government is conducting an investigation of cases of aliens who declare they are American citizens in order to get jobs or to participate in political activity. According to Assistant United States Attorney Francis Kennedy, more than 200 complaints have already been received regarding this practice.

The first tangible results of the drive were the return of indictments last week against two aliens who registered as citizens in order to vote. One registered as a Democrat and one as a Republican.

Those indicted are August Mardoski, 2441 South Albany avenue, who registered in the 8th precinct of the 22d ward, and Dominick Cavalier, 1122 South Mozart street, who registered in the 1st precinct of the 24th ward. Bonds in each case were set at $2,500.

"The majority of our complaints," Prosecutor Kennedy said, "come from American citizens, either native born or naturalized, who are having difficulty getting employment during the depression. Naturally, they are incensed at the idea aliens should get these jobs through misrepresentation.

"A thorough investigation is being made of all the complaints."

In particular false declaration of citizenship is being practiced in the obtaining of passports, vote registration, application for reentry papers, and application for examination in civil service listings. Another practice of the same general nature, but not coming under the criminal statute, is the stating of citizenship in applications for ordinary employment. Many employers will not hire aliens.

The law provides a penalty of two years imprisonment and a $1,000 fine for each count in a conviction. If the alien entered the United States prior to 1924 one such conviction gives ground for deportation. If the entry was later than 1924 two such convictions are necessary for deportation proceedings.

Something for pipe smokers to think about!

ABOUT the year 1864, farmers began to grow what is known as White Burley Tobacco. A few casks of this tobacco were taken to the St. Louis Fair in 1867 and sold for 58c a pound.

White Burley Tobacco is used to make Granger. This tobacco is the best pipe tobacco that grows.

You will notice the difference as soon as you light up your pipe of Granger. There is a most pleasing aroma. It burns slower, and every smoker who tries it says that it smokes cooler and never gums a pipe.

2 BANDITS TOSS DYING MAN FROM CAR AT HOSPITAL

Attempt to Run Down Witnesses.

A dying bandit was tossed out of a roadster near the St. Anthony de Padua hospital, 19th street and Marshall boulevard, shortly after noon yesterday. He died an hour later on the operating table in the hospital.

The bandit was believed to be one of three men who were chased away from the Fairlawn golf course, 22d street and Wolf road, near Hillside, about 11 o'clock yesterday morning.

Fires at Links Prowlers.

The men had been detected rifling automobile parked at the course. Policeman Roy E. Zehner fired several shots after them as they escaped in a roadster and one of the bullets apparently wounded one of the men. Their car sped toward Chicago.

An hour and a half later Ray Silver, 3300 Douglas boulevard, and Barney Silver, 3428 West Monroe street, were walking about 200 feet east of St. Anthony's hospital when they saw a roadster emerge from a driveway. The body of a man was thrust out of the car.

When the two men in the roadster saw that they had been observed they turned their automobile toward the Silver brothers and attempted to run them down, the latter said. They jumped aside and the car disappeared east in 19th street.

Shot in Back of Head.

The Silvers rushed into the hospital and notified physicians. The wounded man was carried inside. A bullet had entered the rear of his head. An operation was performed but he died without recovering consciousness.

The dead man was well dressed. A card found in his pocket contained an invitation to a dance at the Fair Oaks roadhouse on Sept. 21, and the name and address of Charlie Chuck, 5318 South Honoré street, was found penciled on this card. Police began an investigation of this address.

The dead man's finger prints were taken, but he had no police record at the bureau of identification, police found.

CHILD KILLED BY AUTO.

Galesburg, Ill., Oct. 2.—[Special.]—Betty Lou Miller, 5, was instantly killed last night when she ran across the street in front of an oncoming automobile.

GO ON 'EXCURSION'; 26 ARE SEIZED AS COMMON GAMBLERS

New York, Oct. 2.—[Special.]—Between 800 and 1,000 persons sailed from pier 52 North river, today on the excursion steamboat Favorite for a day's outing supposedly arranged by the Unity Social club. But mingling with them were twelve headquarters' detectives who brought the outing to an unexpected close tonight by arresting twenty-six of the passengers as common gamblers and seizing a quantity of gambling paraphernalia.

TOLL OF FLOOD IN CALIFORNIA NOW SET AT 40

Bakersfield, Cal., Oct. 2.—(AP)—While hundreds of searchers plodded through mud and debris seeking other victims of the Tehachapi pass cloudburst, the bodies of six of the ten persons known to have lost their lives Friday night when a 45 foot wall of water swept down out of the mountains were brought here today.

Highway patrolmen feared upwards of 40 persons drowned.

The deluge overflowed canyons and streams, wrecked two freight trains at Woodford, tore up hundreds of yards of railroad track, washed out at least nine bridges and flooded several villages.

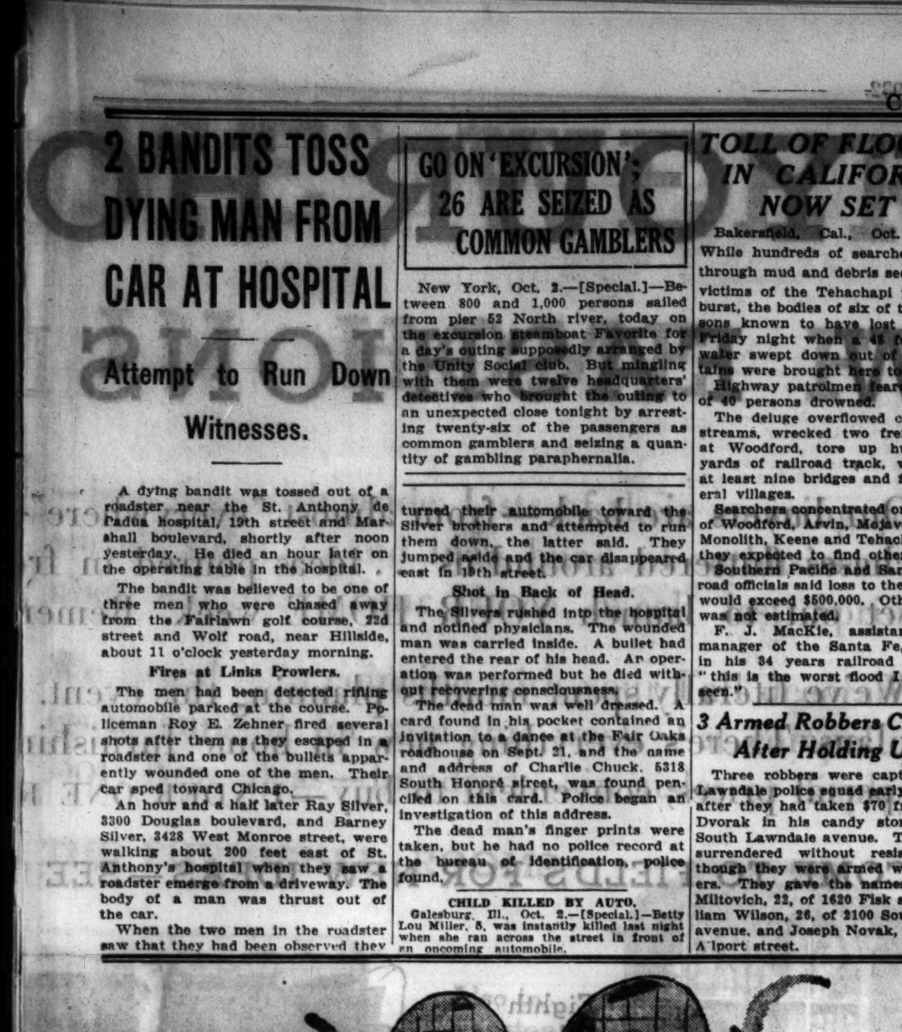
Searchers concentrated on the towns of Woodford, Arvin, Mojave, Caliente, Monolith, Keene and Tehachapi, where they expected to find other dead.

Southern Pacific and Santa Fe railroad officials said loss to their property would exceed $500,000. Other damage was not estimated.

F. J. MacKie, assistant general manager of the Santa Fe, said that in his 34 years railroad experience "this is the worst flood I have ever seen."

3 Armed Robbers Captured After Holding Up Store

Three robbers were captured by a Lawndale police squad early yesterday after they had taken $70 from Frank Dvorak in his candy store at 3111 South Lawndale avenue. The robbers surrendered without resistance, although they were armed with revolvers. They gave the names of Louis Miltovich, 22, of 1620 Fisk street; William Wilson, 26, of 2100 South Racine avenue, and Joseph Novak, 24, of 1812 Allport street.



We made a thorough investigation before we decided on this radical step!

We went around incognito and asked every smart woman we met (and some we hadn't met!) what she thought of shoes in general and shoe prices in particular! We discovered what we already strongly suspected—that there are two kinds of women in the world—those who wear I. Miller shoes, and those who'd like to! . . . So in order to make it possible for every smart woman to reconcile her taste and her pocketbook, we have made this amazing price adjustment. Probably you've heard—for good news travels fast—that I. Miller Beautiful Shoes are now only 10.50, lower than they've been in years and years and years! And even if you've already heard the good news, it will bear repeating—"I. Miller Beautiful Shoes at 10.50 bring exquisitely lovely, perfect-fitting footwear within the reach of every woman who appreciates quality in shoes!"

Our DeLuxe models, too—most of them—have been repriced at 12.50 . . . And youthful, budget-minded little Ingenue models—made expressly for I. Miller—are due to make a big hit at their new little price, 7.50.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY.

II. SOME UNSETTLED POINTS.

Half the power to be derived from the St. Lawrence along the international boundary goes to Canada and half to the United States. The taxpayers of Ontario are going to pay $103,000,000 for the Canadian share of the power, but no one yet knows how much of the American share is going to be paid for by New York state or what disposition New York is going to make of the power which presumably it will contract for.

That makes discussion of the financial provisions of the treaty as they concern the United States extremely difficult. Though the state department has at length announced what it regards as a fair distribution of the cost as between navigation and power, no one can say if this division will be acceptable to New York. Therefore we don't know what the balance chargeable to navigation is, and we don't know and can't estimate what savings, if any, the consumers of electricity in the United States may expect to enjoy.

More than that, we do not know if the power to be derived from the St. Lawrence will be sold at all outside New York state. The legal problem presented is interesting. Decisions of the higher courts suggest that a state cannot forbid a private company selling power outside the state in which it is generated. But suppose the owner of the power is the state itself, as New York proposes to own the power generated along the seaway? Can the state which owns the power not do with it as it pleases? If New York may restrict the flow of St. Lawrence power to its own citizens, is it fair to ask the taxpayers of the whole United States to assist in any way in creating this special monopoly?

That is a troublesome question at best and a particularly troublesome one in the present state of the negotiations between the federal government and New York. It would seem clear that until these negotiations are completed the senate cannot pass intelligently upon the treaty as a whole. A contract with the state of New York covering the division of costs and the disposition of the power generated should be placed before the senate along with the treaty. In the absence of such an agreement it is impossible to estimate with much certainty what the benefits of the seaway may be in relation to its costs. And that, as we have seen, is the essence of the whole problem before the senate and the country.

LOAN PUBLICITY.

The chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, supported by the legal opinion of counsel, has asked the clerk of the house of representatives not to make public the names of borrowers from the corporation during August and the amounts of their respective loans. The clerk, Mr. South Trimble, who had published the first report on the strength of an opinion by his son, is now reconsidering the question. The corporation's general counsel, Mr. Bogue, holds that the statute does not call for publication, which he deems inconsistent with its purpose to protect credit, restore, and furnish relief. Chairman Pomerene protests publicity on this ground and says that the publishing of the July list resulted in much unjust criticism, the circulation of reports that borrowers were in an unsound condition when in fact they were sound, and withdrawals from banks and other institutions. Mr. Bogue holds that it is congress which must order publication. It should certainly clarify its intent in the statute.

A rather delicate and important question of public policy is here raised, whatever the present statute permits or directs. Passed under circumstances of acute panic it may be plausibly argued that publicity was incompatible with the intent of the statute or defensive of its purposes. As panic conditions depart, however, this reason for secrecy must disappear or at least weaken greatly in force. Not so the reason for publicity. With all due respect for the character of the present chairman and board, which is high, the fact remains that the powers of the corporation to dispense a vast sum of the public money to individuals and private enterprises is one which inevitably must be subjected to pressure for special favor and is susceptible of grave abuse. There is no guaranty of the continuance of responsible and highly conscientious control, even if it is conceded that the present officers are not likely to yield to any improper influences whatsoever.

It is unwise, therefore, we are convinced, to establish a practice of secrecy and a precedent which, if not now, at least as time goes by, will open the way to abuses. Special favors, improper allowances, will certainly creep in behind the official curtain. We know of no method upon which the public may rely for a check upon the distribution of the public money other than timely publication, and such disadvantages to individuals as may be attendant upon this method seem to us far less serious than the possibilities inherent in secrecy.

JUST MONDAY.

Mr. Garner, say the Republican managers, must be remembered for his post offices. Some of these mail mausoleums are and some of them aren't. A long time ago Post Office Jack said if the Yankees got a ham he would get a hog, but Uvalde, the Texan's home town, population five thousand, has only $55,000 worth of letter boxes and stamp windows and Boyne City, Michigan, population two thousand six hundred, has opened a postal home worth $65,000. Mr. Garner was headed off in the flower of his achievement or there would have been a billion dollars shot in third class postmasters' havens and rural free delivery retreats.

The peak of the federal public edifice need not be expected until the government is in the power business. What can be done with power stations at the cross roads should be left to better imaginations than even that of Mr. Garner. The taxpayer will be going over Boulder Dam, with or without a barrel, probably without. The political liberal requires redefinition. He once was a citizen who yielded the right of opportunity to the other fellow without disqualifications. Now he is liberal with the other fellow's possessions. The brother who was policing his feet after two days' march and fight said it when he heard that General, now Sir John, Pershing intended to take Metz if it cost him two hundred thousand men. "Generous ——!" The language of a rude and licentious soldiery must be suppressed.

The Republican radical who takes his tub to Gov. Roosevelt is to be referred to Norman Thomas who, only because he is humane and recoils from blood, would not nail his ears to the post. Mr. Thomas is referred to Comrade Zack Foster, who would not shrink from letting out the social error with a snickersnack, and Comrade Zack can be referred to Moscow where his pilfling uses of the great American opportunity would earn him a sunrise salute and call in the undertaker. Each radical has another radical to hold him in scorn and the closer they are to each other the further they are apart. When they are all finally classified each planner has one plan. All others are lollipops for the five year olds.

The enthusiasts who gathered by the scores of thousands in the Chicago streets to welcome Gov. Roosevelt made a feature of their parade by going back to the old fashioned torch of Grover Cleveland, illuminating the new era with the flame of traditionalism. When the Zackites parade they will carry acetylene torches and be looking for the locks.

As the campaign progresses the better nature of the two major parties emerges from the cloud of strife. The Republicans gave Mr. Curtis to the Democrats and the Democrats gave Mr. Garner to the Republicans. This is magnificent but is it politics?

Another college liberal says that the program for Chicago, in the Planned Society, will have as a principal plank a declaration for the right to work as above the interests of private profits and will also include better relief administration, payment of rent, gas and light, medical, dental and hospital care, public housing, the five day week and six hour day and unemployment insurance. The source of all this is not indicated. There are to be wages without profits. It is very intellectual. The capitalists will be chained to their desks and occasionally fed a hot dog. Nevertheless the plan smells of exploitation of the masses. It proposes to grind the faces of the poor. Where is the free valet service and breakfast in bed?

The ultimate sign of the times is found in the streets near a moving picture house—pickets with placards protesting against two movie, radio and vaudeville comedians as "unfair to organized thinking."

BEER, BUT NO REVENUE.

Senator Glenn, speaking at a meeting of the Junior Association of Commerce, said that the question was not one of beer, but of revenue. The beer is here now. So are other alcoholic beverages, wine and liquor. Prohibition merely affects quality and revenue. Quantity and use are virtually undisturbed. The beverages lack palatability and purity, but not procurability. The peculiarities of the government do not wholly wash revenue out of the sale of contraband. Congress put a tax on the makings of wine and beer, encouraging the treasury to expect some revenue from violations of the Volstead act.

The hypocrisy of the act is great, but the revenue is comparatively small. Thus far congress has preferred to get a little by stultifying itself rather than get a revenue of real importance by being honest. The consequence is loss of income and self-respect. The government is out of revenue, but the alcoholic products which it could tax are widely distributed and sold. The loss is one of income and good faith, and will continue to be a loss until the federal government comes back to view the use of intoxicants as a question of excise and not of government controlled morality.

Editorial of the Day

IRONICAL TOUCH.

[Baltimore Evening Sun.]

The way the progressives are flocking to the Roosevelt standard is one of the most striking phenomena of the campaign, and at the same time it furnishes a mildly ironical touch.

Progressives are people who believe in vast extensions of government's control over the property, lives, habits and social activities of its citizens. The fact that these extensions necessarily mean more laws, more jobholders and therefore higher taxes and less liberty does not daunt the progressives. They continue to demand more governmental interference with everybody.

And yet they flock to Roosevelt, ignoring the fact that in Mr. Hoover they have the most perfect exponent of their policy who ever occupied the presidential chair. Under Hoover the government has thrust itself further into the private lives of Americans than it has gone under any other President. Under Hoover the government has undertaken more functions formerly left to private initiative than it has taken under any other President. Under Hoover there are more laws on the statute books than ever before; therefore, more chances of breaking a law every day, and so more chances of going to jail—that is, less liberty. And, as a natural and inevitable consequence, under Hoover government is vastly more expensive than it ever was before.

Well, what do the progressives want? If they really believe in their own ideas, why do they leave Hoover and turn to Roosevelt?

GOOD INSURANCE RISK.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

EDITOR ALFRED EMANUEL SMITH, writing a nice piece for his paper, the Outlook, Saturday, said that as to the Democratic victory next November he was in favor of it. Editor Smith omitted naming the Messrs. Roosevelt and Garner, who, it is generally understood, are the Democratic candidates. His attitude towards them was much like that of the old lady who was climbing into one of the carriages reserved for the mourners at a funeral. "Were you a friend of the deceased," asked the undertaker. "Oh, mercy, no," replied the old lady, "and never wanted to be. I'm just going for the ride."

WHILE EDITOR SMITH is sure the Democrats are going to win this year, let us not jump hastily to the idea that he is at all enthusiastic for the Democratic candidates. Let us not be misled by appearances. Which reminds one of the Irishman on the train who was approached by the conductor shouting brusquely: "Hey, youse, no smoking in this car." "I hain't smokin'," replied the Irishman. "You've got a pipe in your mouth," insisted the conductor. "An' sure I have," said the Irishman, "an' I've got shoes on me feet, too, but I hain't walkin'."

"ADAM HAD 'EM."

The shortest bit of English verse,
So pregnant and intensely terse,
Writ by that lanky Hoosier man,
My old friend, Strickland Gillilan,
Now gratefully recurs to me,
In times of sore adversity—
"Adam
Had 'em."

No matter what my troubles are (Except, perhaps, with motor car),
Chilblains or chiggers, teeth that ache,
Or hopes that fail, or ties that break,
Or lack of proper clothes to wear
When driven from summer's Eden, fair,
"Adam
Had 'em."

Or when Temptation's serpents crawl,
And pangs of unripe fruit befall,
It is a solace to reflect—
And grow contrite but not abject—
It's just another common curse,
As set forth in that little verse:
"Adam
Had 'em."

And so I lift my feeble voice
In praise of living, and rejoice,
In spite of flaming cherubim
That threaten me and banished him.
Still, in or out of Paradise,
Dwells Eve, and many things quite nice;
And
"Adam

"GERMANS OPEN VOTE Campaign with Rioting."—Headline. Shucks! We don't see any story in that. Since Herr Hitler got to charging around the Germans seem to open everything with a riot, the reichstag, massmeetings, church socials, the junior class of the turnverein, the kaiser's birthday, the president's birthday, Herr Hitler's birthday, the Horseshoers' Fun and Pleasure association, the West Berlin Ladies' Bridge club, and the Munich Culture club, the Rhine Canary Fanciers' club, and everything else in Germany. Everything has to be opened with a riot, even a beer keg.

"MUST WE STARVE?" is the title of a new book that belongs to the "Scare-'em" school of literature, which has taken the place of the detective stories so popular a year ago. The "Scare-'em" books are designed to make us take a stern look at the economic question and see what we're heading into if we don't do a right about face. But "Must We Starve?" isn't a title that will shock many of us into probing into our money and political situation. Nobody is afraid of starving. The general idea is that the only people who starve are fat ladies who want to reduce, girls that wish to retain their figgers, and Mahatma Gandhi, who wants publicity. Ask anybody if he's afraid that things might come to the place where there would be danger of his starving to death and he'd say don't be silly, we've got enough stuff in the icebox right now to last a week and we can always go to my wife's mother's. Now, if an author wanted a real "scare-'em" book he ought to pick a title such as "Must We Do Without Autos?" or "Must We Do Without the Movies?" or "Must We Do Without the Radio?" The thought of starving isn't going to scare anybody, but if people are confronted with the idea of going without the necessities of life, such as their automobile, the movie show, and their radios, they'd decide right away that there was a crisis coming this way and it was time to do something about it.

MEMENTO.

It may be we shall never meet again—
The twisted paths of life shall never find
Their way into the enchanted land
That they have known . . . I wonder, will you mind?

Whatever comes, the memory of your kiss
Will burn my lips a little when I'm old,
The crushing warmth I found within your arms
Will shelter me from all the coming cold.

You have my heart to keep the memory bright
As spring comes back, and days go into years.
Unless, of course, you don't save souvenirs.

CHARLEY CURTIS says prosperity will come out from behind that corner just as it did after the panic of 1837. Yes, but the United States didn't have so many buildings. Nowadays there's so many corners that as fast as we smoke prosperity out from behind one of 'em, dinged if he doesn't hunt up another one. R. H. L.

I AM asked what harm is liable to follow when a left-handed child is trained to use the right hand and the effect on character and poise. Could a person who has been changed over make good at such work as court reporting?

For some unexplained reason one side of the body dominates most of the tasks undertaken. This applies not only to muscle acts but it is true of common sensations and even of vision. If a right-handed person is properly examined he is found to be right-legged and right-eyed as well. In some cases the right side dominates. If only one hand is to be used there is no hesitation, the right hand moves into action. If the two sides are nearly on a par fine recording instruments would show frequent momentary indecision as to which hand would be used for the job in hand. In the course of time a right-handed person has had his machinery running in grooves in which the right side does most of the tasks. When things run in grooves the higher brain centers are not called on.

If a right-handed person tries to do something with the left hand he is reminded that few ruts or grooves run over that route. His higher centers are called on—first, to make the decision, and second, to help out in doing the job because of the increased difficulty due to the deficiency of ruts. This results in momentary indecision, in halting, in some confusion, and in inefficiency of effort.

All of which reversed applies to left-handed people. If a left-handed adult, adolescent, or older child is trained to be right-handed he finds the paths to and from the newly used centers not worn into smooth deep roots. He stifles his established impulse to use the old ruts and forces himself to use the new and less perfect ones. This results in a little delay, a little halting, some indecision, and some confusion.

In most efforts these effects are trivial. In some they are much more serious. Occasionally speech defects result. This is as would be expected. Are not stammering and stuttering largely the results of failure to make quick and natural decisions, to decide and act naturally? Are they not largely the result of the thinking of ideas and the making of word sounds not running on the same schedule. If one runs in poor grooves it is not apt to reach junction stations at the moment the other train gets there. Is not panic a dominating factor? At that, speech defects caused by changing from left-sidedness to right-sidedness is the exception rather than the rule.

The effects on character and poise inquired about are more remote than those on speech. Probably they are largely social. The switch does tend to confusion and indecision—sometimes more, usually less. These tendencies, in turn, in the course of time change personality, attitudes, and social traits. For instance, they may cause inferiority complexes as we can appreciate.

However, these are not the usual results. They are quite infrequent. They represent the remoter possibilities in the way of radiating influences.

NERVOUSNESS IS CAUSE.

M. F. W. writes: I suffer from an enormous amount of gas. It forces its way up in long gulps which are extremely annoying and embarrassing. This happens all through the day, from arising to retiring, at intervals of from one to thirty minutes.

What could be the cause?

Is it serious?

Do you think there is any chance of this ceasing eventually of its own accord?

REPLY.

The cause is nervousness. You swallow or partly swallow air and then belch it up. You probably have some little stomach disorder which causes an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach. This causes air to be swallowed, and this, in turn, causes belching. It is not serious. It may disappear without treatment. This group of cases constitutes the principal field of operations of the food faddists and cultists. Self-cure is frequent. If taking medicine appears to cure, it is generally faith that does the work.

HEADACHES.

O. H. W. writes: I suffer with chronic headache commencing at the top of the neck and spreading over the head to the eyes. Would an operation through the nose into the head relieve me or cure the headache? What would cure such headache? I am 68 years old.

REPLY.

Headaches that commence at your time of life have a significance that differs from that of headachs in younger persons. An effort should be made to find the cause.

Headaches that travel from the neck over the head to the eyes are likely to be rheumatic. Do you get temporary relief from salicylate preparations?

Most headaches appearing first in persons beyond middle life are due to arteriosclerosis. What is your blood pressure? What is the condition of the blood vessels of your retina?

Your handwriting indicates that you have paralysis agitans. Is that the cause of your headache? I see no reason for operation.

PROBABLY ATHLETE'S FOOT.

E. E. C. writes: I have been suffering for some time with a foot disease beneath and between my toes. The flesh is very itchy and whitens as if blistered or scalded. Water forms in these until they are broken. What can this be?

REPLY.

I judge that it is ringworm dermatitis, commonly called athlete's foot. It can be kept under control by attention to the feet, including the toenails.

BANKRUPTCY.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Eight months ago I filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, taking a pauper's petition, and paid the fee of $35 in installments of $5 monthly. This is now fully paid. 1. Is a discharge of debts automatically granted? 2. Or must it be applied for? 3. If it must be applied for, can I do it, or must the attorney do it? J. K.

1. Yes, in the sense that the adjudication entered within a few days of your application is a defense. No, in the sense that a discharge must be applied for within one year.

2. See 1.

3. Depends on your experience in such matters. Ordinarily it is advisable to leave such a transaction to your attorney.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

WARRANTY DEED.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. If one holds a warranty deed to property must it be recorded immediately, or can it be held indefinitely and then recorded? My father has given me a warranty deed to his property. He is financially unable to pay his taxes or interest on a first mortgage. He has requested that it should not be recorded until the mortgage is renewed in 1933 and then offers to have the deed made out in joint tenancy. 2. Is this sufficient security so that in case of his death relatives couldn't contest the arrangement in court, if it were recorded at that time? The warranty deed was made out in August, 1931, and signed by my mother and father and witnessed by a brother and sister-in-law. M. P. S.

1. If the grantee fails to record his deed he runs the risk of being defeated by subsequent deeds from the same grantor.

2. Question might be raised as to whether the deed was validly delivered during his lifetime. There is also the usual possibility of question as to undue influence or lack of mental capacity. If substantial property is involved we advise you to employ an attorney.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

OFFENDER WARNED.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—[Friend of the People.]—A grocery store in our neighborhood comes over in the lot in rear of our building and burns all their rubbish, causing a smell to come up in our flat all day. We have to keep our doors and windows shut. Also, a meat market next door smokes their meats in back yard and also have chickens and the yard is overrun with rats.

E. M. J.

Report is made that grocer has been notified to discontinue further dumping; to provide regulation containers for accommodation of refuse output and to have same removed regularly and frequently by private scavenger service. Location will be kept under observation to see that notices are complied with. JOSEPH J. BUTLER, Superintendent of Streets.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

OCTOBER 3, 1916.

CHICAGO.—Who got the money? The Cook county grand jury will be asked, today or tomorrow, to help State's Attorney Hoyne answer this question as it pertains to the assets of the Sportsmen's Club of America, in which the present mayor is a leading figure. According to the state's attorney, between $100,000 and $140,000 has been collected by the club in membership fees alone. According to records gathered by his assistants, creditors have obtained judgments against the club for nearly $15,000 in the Municipal court alone. In addition, chattel mortgages outstanding against the club amount to between $6,000 and $7,000. So Mr. Hoyne asks, if the club treasurer didn't get the money, who did? By way of suggesting an answer, the prosecutor will present to the grand jury evidence that the Sportsmen's club was organized as "a blind for getting gambling graft and for shaking down saloonkeepers and prominent citizens."

BERLIN.—On a battle front of twelve miles, north of the Somme, the French and British charged the Germans time after time yesterday. They were repulsed, the war office announces, and suffered heavy losses.

LONDON. — The Rumanians have invaded Bulgaria. On the upper reaches of the Danube between the fortified towns of Rustchuk and Turtukai, where the river begins its bend northeastward, leaving Bulgarian territory and separating Rumania proper from Dobrudja, the troops of Rumania have made their way to the southern bank of the stream. Just how many men were thrown across the river is not disclosed in either the Rumania or German official communications.

CHICAGO.—The Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, Thirtieth street and Indiana avenue, settled its troubles last night with the Rock River conference of the Methodist Episcopal church. It will receive a pastor next Sunday at the hands of Bishop Thomas Nicholson, who presides at the Rock River conference which begins tonight in the Olivet church, Adams street and Keeler avenue. As a consequence the Rev. Frank P. Blakemore, who is a Congregational minister and has been serving the Trinity church for a year past, is out of a job.

CHICAGO.—Edward S. Lacey, chairman of the advisory committee of the Continental and Commercial National bank and a former controller of the currency, died last evening at his residence in Evanston. The banker was born 81 years ago in Chili, N. Y. In 1861 he married Miss Annette C. Musgrave in Charlotte, Mich., and entered the banking business there the following year. President Harrison appointed him controller of the currency in 1889. He held this post for three years, resigning to come to Chicago as president of the newly organized Bankers' National bank.

WORLD SERIES

Fourth Game—Oct. 12, 1916.

BROOKLYN.—[By I. E. Sanborn.]—Larry Gardner put the Boston Red Sox within one game of the world's championship of 1916 with a home run drive that also scored Hoblitzel and Lewis in the second inning today, breaking up a battle that had started going Brooklyn's way. Final score, 6 to 2. Rube Marquard tried to come back and cop the fourth game but was not equal to the task in so short a time, although the Robins gave him a lead of two runs with a vicious attack on Dutch Leonard in the first inning. Marquard retired, a beaten man, after the fourth inning and Boss Robinson sent Larry Cheney in to stop things if he could. But the Carrigans were not afraid of Cheney's spit ball and made two runs off the former Cub before he was taken out in the seventh. With the game gone, Manager Robinson pulled the tremolo stop of the sentimental organ by sending Nap Rucker, veteran pitcher and former mainstay of the Brooklyn team, to the slab for the last two innings. With a slow ball that looked as large as a watermelon Rucker stopped the Red Sox with nothing and struck out three of them. Carrigan went into the game himself today to catch Leonard's stuff and the way he worked the big southpaw was a wonder.

A SPIDER THAT JUMPS.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Some relatives of mine have discovered in their basement a new species of insect, unless some one else knows of or has seen spiders that can jump as far as grasshoppers.

The spider, or whatever it is (and it has been seen by persons who haven't taken a drink either before or since prohibition), has all the physical proportions of a spider; that is, a round body from which several thin and nondescript legs project in all directions. But, in addition, it has a pair of legs just like a grasshopper's, jointed and folded and well formed and well developed, with meaty thighs and spindle shins—or am I going too far on the details?

Anyway, it was quite disconcerting to the owner of the premises to attempt to wallop one of these crawling things, and, just as soon as the cudgel began to descend to have him leap from five to ten feet away. One was finally struck by forming a walloping party of several persons, all surrounding the beast and when he leaped hitting him the instant he landed. The auxiliary legs were discovered by examining the first corpse.

And, what is more amasing, we found that this strange animal can jump backward as far as it can forward, and with equal agility. (We are assuming now that the jumping legs are attached to the animal's rear; if they are not, then the darned thing can jump forward as well as backward, as he was doing a back flip in the first place, if I make myself clear.)

If any one knows the name of this queer thing my relatives and friends and I would like to be informed through these columns.

LITTLE CHILDREN IN SCHOOL.

Chicago, Sept. 21.—As a mother of little children and a former first grade teacher, I wish to protest against children in the kindergarten and primary grades being kept in school the same hours as an eighth grade pupil. We read of progressive and experimental schools started, yet the kindergartners and primary grades must stay till twelve noon. I am told this is because the safety boys cannot patrol the crossings earlier. Would it not be better to allow boys out for five minutes at 11:30 or else employ some of the unemployed to escort the little children across the street?

It used to be that one-half went home early in the forenoon and the other half in the afternoon. This gave the teacher a little chance for individual work. What chance is there in a room of fifty for each to learn to read and write at the age of six?

MRS. CLARA HAUSER.

GRIME AND DILAPIDATION.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—Right in the vicinity of the Century of Progress grounds is the deplorable nest of old dilapidated brewery buildings and coal yards, together with the Illinois Central roundhouse, the absence of which would be a wonderful improvement. It would seem that the city council and south park commissioners should have power to abolish these eyesores if the owners have no pride in doing so. General repairs, exterior painting and cleaning of ground with better care of shrubbery would add materially throughout the city, all of which would cost relatively little.

The South Central association has done much during the last year to make a general cleaning up in the district west of the one referred to, though there is much yet to be done for the general good of that community. The things said about this particular district will apply to many other sections of the city, especially along the railroads, as strangers cannot but get a wrong impression from these particular viewpoints. NELSON S. SPENCER.

TRUCKS AND JOBS.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—I wonder if it ever occurred to F. Roosevelt when he made the statement about limiting the trucks to help the railroads that he would be increasing unemployment. Here are a few facts which may interest him.

The average freight train consists of approximately 50 cars having a capacity of about 40 tons each. A crew of six men handle this tonnage en route. The same volume of freight gives employment to at least 200 men hauling it on trucks. There are also other factors in favor of motor trucks which, I think, can be seen by any fair minded person. The revenue derived from this freight when handled by trucks is divided amongst these 200 men and not the biggest portion going to a favored few. In this way there certainly is a greater distribution of money.

Just one more thought. I wonder if any of you who have condemned some of the trucks on the highway to hades for slowing down your Sunday rides or your trips out to the lakes stopped to consider that if it weren't for that big truck up there you wouldn't be riding on the smooth highway which is open to you. Explanation? Easy—the average truck consumes somewhere between 300 and 500 gallons of gas per week. Try to compute taxes derived from this source alone. My truck is valued around $3,000 and each year I pay in the neighborhood of $1,000 in aggregate taxes. And the railroads are borrowing my money in the shape of a federal loan to keep from going broke.

LOYAL TO THE SOX.

Forest Park, Ill., Sept. 27.—In reply to J. E. Howard's article about the White Sox let me say that the Sox are as much a major league ball team as any of the fifteen other teams in the big show.

If Fonseca has a few hard hitting outfielders next year there will be seven teams in the American league and one in the National league that will know that there is a major league team on the south side of Chicago.

I hope that Lew has the good luck to land Simmons and Foxx, but I don't believe things are half as bad as Mr. Howard pictures them. With the exception of Hodapp all of the players who were switched from one position to another had played these positions some time or other during their careers. But supposing that they didn't; it isn't the first time that players have been changed from one position to another. Every one admits that McGraw knows baseball and he converted Lindstrom from a third baseman into an outfielder. Peck changed Morgan from a first baseman to an outfielder and then to a third baseman. Hornsby switched English from a shortstop to a third baseman. Bob Smith was an infielder. Babe Ruth was a pitcher. Ben Chapman was an infielder. Stephenson was an infielder, not to mention scores of others who have been switched around, so I don't think that Fonseca has revolutionized baseball with his changes. HARRY KERGAN.

CAMP ALGONQUIN TO BE OPENED TO POOR ALL WINTER

Ends Its Most Successful Summer Season.

For the last two weeks Mrs. Astrid Save, superintendent of Camp Algonquin, has gone about desolate buildings putting away bedding, toys, dishes, and a hundred other reminders of the happy summer spent there by nearly 1,900 mothers and children from Chicago's tenements.

The last mothers and their families came back to the city about the middle of September. Since then a staff has been putting the Fox river camp in order for a new winter plan of service to the needy—the care of convalescent men and the establishment of a sewing center for some of the cotton material given the Red Cross by the government.

Host to Destitute Families.

From June to September Camp Algonquin was host to some of the most destitute and deserving families in Chicago. The contributions of TRIBUNE readers aided greatly in supporting the camp, which is administered by the United Charities of Chicago. The largest individual gift of $1,000 came from an anonymous donor. In addition, the Golden Gloves fund of THE TRIBUNE contributed $3,000. In all the camp fund received $6,397.98 during the season.

The families were selected from the districts of the United Charities, regardless of race or creed, and were taken to the camp free of charge by the Chicago and North Western railroad. One group of 76 children from the stock yards district spent the entire summer building up undernourished bodies under the direction of the staff of nurses and a dietitian. The mothers with their children went to the camp for two-week periods, except a few who remained most of the summer and helped in the kitchen.

Happier Than Ever.

"I believe people were happier at the camp this year than they have ever been," Joel D. Hunter, superintendent of the United Charities, said yesterday. "They seemed to enjoy the place to the fullest. They were sure where food for the next two weeks was coming from, and, relieved of that worry, they could take a real delight in their vacations.

"We had a very successful season from the point of view of health," Mr. Hunter continued. "There was no infection nor contagion for the first time in my memory."

Despite the withdrawal of coöperating agencies which in the past have aided in the camp's program Algonquin went ahead during the past summer taking care of a larger number of women and children. The board of education was unable to send the teachers, but many teachers volunteered their services. There were no nurses from the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium, but volunteer nurses came to the rescue. The Infant Welfare society, which had charge of the nursery, and the Elizabeth McCormick Memorial fund, which sent a nutrition worker for the all-summer children, were back again. A volunteer physician also was at the camp all summer.

Cost Nearly $20,000.

A total of 1,744 persons was taken care of during the summer and, counting the entire camp, including the all-summer children, 1,897 vacations of two weeks were given. The cost of this will be between $18,000 and $20,000.

For the first time the United Charities expects to keep the camp open all winter. Only the buildings built for winter tenancy can be put to use, thus limiting the attendance to 30 or 35 persons. Some of these will be convalescent men. The rest will be the women who will sew on the Red Cross material, fashioning garments for the needy. The administration building will be available for charity workers who have not been allowed vacations because of the extreme pressure of relief work.

"Sewing machines will be greatly appreciated from any one wishing to contribute them," Mr. Hunter said.

DISABLED VETS TO HAVE FLOWER DAY ON NOV. 11

After denying the Disabled American Veterans permission last February to tag on the streets the city council has legalized the sale of forget-me-nots by this organization on Nov. 11. In denying permission to tag in the early part of this year, members of the city council stated that they believed the D. A. V. should participate in Poppy day with other veteran organizations.

The change in sentiment among the council members, according to one alderman, was due to promises made to the council finance committee by a representative of the organization. This representative stated, the alderman said, that the D. A. V. would have its receipts counted by a loop bank, that it would account to the council for all expenditures, and that it would not, as formerly, send part of its receipts out of Cook county.

The Veterans' Poppy Day association, composed of the Grand Army of the Republic, United Spanish War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the American Legion, has requested the council to permit solicitation of funds for veteran relief on one day only—Poppy day. This association also has expressed its willingness to accept the D. A. V. in its membership.

SAID TO CONFESS TEXAS SLAYING AFTER QUARREL

Galveston, Tex., Oct. 2.—(AP)—Murder and robbery charges have been filed against William R. Ryals, 22 year old stenographer, with the identification of a body removed from a shallow grave beneath an island camp house as that of A. G. MacGuerty, 33, Boston and Chicago newspaper circulation auditor.

Ryals will be returned tomorrow to Fort Worth, where MacGuerty disappeared a week ago, to face the charges. Police said he had confessed he shot MacGuerty in an argument near that city Sunday night and drove to Galveston island to bury the body under the deserted cabin. Brought here from Fort Worth Saturday, he led officers to the grave.

He was arrested when he sought to claim the auditor's effects at a rooming house. Police said he was driving MacGuerty's car.

A. X. Morton of the Audit Bureau of Circulation, by which MacGuerty also was employed, definitely identified the body. It was held here pending instructions from the victim's mother, Mrs. Catherine MacGuerty of Winchester, Mass.

JOBS AND PAY ROLLS SHOW FIRST UPTURN IN 36 MONTHS HERE

For the first time in 36 months Illinois industries are showing increases both in employment and pay rolls, according to the latest monthly report of the state department of labor. Based on the reports of 1,500 companies employing 262,912 persons for the month of August, there was an increase of 1.3 per cent in employment and 2.9 in pay rolls.

"If there is a similar increase, above the natural seasonal increase, in September," said Howard B. Myers, chief of the division of statistics and research, "the situation will be definitely hopeful. While the increase was not large, it was certainly better than the unbroken parade of declines which have characterized every monthly report for the last three years."

In Chicago the increase was somewhat greater than the all state average. Manufacturers showed an increase of 3.9 per cent in employment and 9.1 per cent in pay rolls. The unemployment ratio for the state fell slightly.

Among the industries which reported sharp increases in employment, aside from coal mining, which led the list among the larger groups with 83.8 per cent, were the following: Men's hats, 61.3; confectionery, 55.6; fruit and vegetable canning, 28.3; watches and jewelry, 26.5; women's hats, 23.5; leather, 21.7; electrical apparatus, 14.8; agricultural implements, 13.8; lime, cement, and plaster, 14.1; brick, tile, and pottery, 13.7, and wholesale dry goods, 7.7. Of these the activity in electrical apparatus, agricultural implements, and dry goods was considered most important.

Diner Finishes Eating, Then Robs Cafe Cashier

A well dressed man, who had just finished his dinner, stepped to the front counter in the G & T restaurant at 100 East Ohio street, last night, and handed a note along with his check to Miss Maxine Glass of 917 East 50th street, the cashier. Miss Glass read the note. It stated that the writer was a robber and wanted the receipts. Miss Glass was slow to obey and the man whispered: "Give me the money or I'll kill you." From his sleeve he revealed a pistol. The cashier handed him $100 and he walked away. None of the other diners was aware of the holdup.

YANKEE VETERAN DUELS 2 FRENCH FOES OVER WIFE

Seriously Wounds Former Officer in Clash.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Oct. 2.—The story of how a Yankee war veteran seriously wounded a former French officer in a pistol duel near Paris recently and then fought another duel on the spot with the victim's second, which was published exclusively yesterday in the European edition of THE TRIBUNE, was borne out by additional details which were obtained today.

Friends of the duelists still refuse to divulge the names of either the principals or their seconds and police insist they have no knowledge of the affair. From members and officials of the American Legion at Paris, however, it was learned that one duelist is an American war veteran who is living in Paris, that he is a crack pistol shot, and that he has many connections with the French army.

French Officers Are Seconds.

This was attested by the fact that two high French officers served as his seconds in the encounter and a French general is originally said to have offered himself as a second.

The duel arose over a point of honor, the American having received a number of anonymous letters of a scandalous nature about his wife, who is a Frenchwoman. The Frenchman, who is tonight at the point of death in a hospital, mentioned the existence of the letters while dining one evening at the American's home.

The challenge to duel came when the Yank insinuated that the Frenchman himself was the author of the letters. The duel took place on Sept. 15, it was learned, on a private estate near the Forest Marly. In the first exchange of bullets the American was not hit but the Frenchman dropped with a ball in his right side. An antitetanus injection was immediately given and other emergency treatments administered on the spot by a doctor.

American Slips and Is Hit.

One of the Frenchman's seconds then declared the principal had not received full satisfaction and the second duel followed. This time in turning to face the man at the word "fire!" the American slipped on the ground, but his bullet grazed his adversary's neck while he himself received a superficial wound from the French officer's bullet.

All three were taken to a hospital, but only the challenger, who was hit in the abdomen, remained there. His condition has grown steadily more alarming. Today a blood transfusion was performed, it was learned, but the doctors were not optimistic.

A sensation was created in French society as well as in the American colony by the Paris TRIBUNE'S article. All French afternoon newspapers today printed the account of the duels on their front pages despite their inability to obtain more precise information.

It is hinted in some French reports that the sureté générale, French police system, is now actively interested in the case.

ITALIAN FASCISTI TO AWAIT DISARM PARLEY ACTION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Oct. 2.—The Fascist grand council adjourned last night for a month because it was believed that the disarmament situation will by that time have shaped itself definitely, it was learned today. Italy will then be able to decide better as to her attitude, it is pointed out.

During the short session of the council Premier Mussolini made a general report on international problems affecting Italy, which, according to advices, was not considered optimistic.

Italy, it was said, may carry out her threat to quit the league of nations and will only continue to be represented at Geneva if there are indications of an equitable and radical solution of the disarmament problem.

Stop a COLD the First Day!

Taken Promptly, this Four-Way Remedy Will Usually Stop a Cold the First Day and Save You Much Suffering as Well as the Danger of Serious Complications!

The time to stop a cold is before it gets started. Once a cold fastens its grip on you, it becomes twice as hard to remove. And a cold lodged in the system may lead to something worse.

Don't hope to kill a cold with merely local or external applications. A cold is a germ attack, an internal infection, and, as such, calls for internal treatment.

Don't hope to kill a cold, either, with anything except a COLD remedy. A cure-all is self-deception. Many preparations which people commonly take for a cold actually make the relief of a cold more difficult because these preparations are constipating and also make the system acid.

The Required Effects

The thing to take for a cold or case of grippe is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine—because it does the four things necessary, in the way that is necessary.

First of all, it opens the bowels, gently but thoroughly—the first step in knocking a cold. Secondly, it kills the cold germs in the system, expels the poisonous infection and reduces the fever. Thirdly, it relieve the headache and that grippy feeling. Fourthly, it tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

Harmless, but Effective!

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine may be taken with utter safety by young and old. It contains no narcotics and produces no bad after-effects. It does not upset the stomach, nauseate or make the head ring or swim.

In dainty tablet form, Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is convenient and pleasant to take, as well as effective. Comes in handy, pocket size boxes, cellophane-wrapped, and is sold by every drug store in America.

When you feel a cold coming on, take a few of the tablets immediately. This will usually expel the cold overnight and prevent the infection from spreading within the system and becoming fixed and dangerous. Remember, a cold is nothing to trifle with!

He's shifting gears when you're sifting ashes

IT ISN'T GOING to be a long, cold winter for Marcus A. Hirschl, 5620 Kimbark Avenue. He's prolonging his summer through these fine Fall week-ends . . . out having a good time golfing and motoring instead of carrying out ashes and puttering around the furnace. He heats his home with gas.

He and Mrs. Hirschl are taking in all of the football games this season. They haven't stayed home to watch the furnace a single day in the last two years—since the time they installed gas heat.

Mrs. Hirschl has her afternoons for bridge, shopping and enjoying life with her three healthy children. "And they really are healthy", she tells us. "We haven't had a doctor in the last two years." This is not surprising to any one who knows the even, dependable temperature of a home automatically heated by gas.

If you aren't considering gas heat, don't talk to Mr. Hirschl unless you want to be sold. "Zero weather means nothing to me", he says. "I get my extra forty winks every morning just the same. And the house warms up while I'm still in bed. As for all this talk about expense, the new rates have cut our cost almost in half. We have never considered gas heat expensive. And I can't understand why any one would let such a good thing as this pass him by".

Now you can TRY Gas Heat

You can rent a gas burner for as little as $5 a month. This burner fits right into your present steam or hot water boiler or warm air furnace. If you decide to buy, the rentals will apply on the purchase price. There is no expensive tank or equipment to buy. If you are not completely satisfied we will remove the burner and restore your heating plant to its original condition. Remember, gas for house heating is delivered to you through a separate meter and billed at a new wholesale rate. Try gas heat, now—you have everything to gain! Send the coupon, or phone Wabash 6000.

FIND OUT FOR YOURSELF

Be fair with yourself—don't deny yourself the comfort of gas heat without actually knowing its cost for your home. Don't accept hearsay. Ask the gas company for an estimate. Then try gas heat in your own home. You'll be surprised. Considering its cleanliness, health and comfort—and its savings in redecorating costs, you'll find you're paying no more for gas heat than the fuel you use now.

10 Rooms—Year's Heating Cost, $22 per Room

Mr. Hirschl lives in this large 10-room home at 5620 Kimbark Ave. Figured under the present low rate, the cost of heating his home last winter would have been only $220—or $22 per room for the whole year. Gas heat is now so cheap every Chicago home should have it. Get the facts on its cost for your home. A representative of the gas company will give you a reliable estimate without obligating you in any way.

Rent Low; Booze Can Be Had on Credit.

The finding of a New York journalist that one can join the ranks of that city's 32,000 speakeasy proprietors with an outlay of $10,000 has occasioned much discussion among the more speculative prohibition sleuths of Chicago. It is their opinion that the journalist must have been thinking of night clubs or else the prospective speakeasy operator would be a greater sucker than his customers. All you need in Chicago for a first class speakeasy, they say, is $1,500.

It has been the experience of Col. Woodcock's dry myrmidons that the most successful speakeasy is one operated in the guise of a restaurant, with some attractive sign out in front boosting the meals and inviting the ladies. For such a place the basement of some flat building, which can be rented for $75 a month, is ideal.

Landlords More Moderate.

There was a time when the landlord would ask $300 a month if you intended to open a joint, but the federal judges are wise to this form of avarice and there is danger of being held for conspiracy. The depression, too, has been a big factor in bringing down the speakeasy rent.

The first item of equipment, of course, is a bar, which will cost about $200, whether you buy it at a marshal's auction sale or have a carpenter make it, with a rubber composition instead of a mahogany top. The kitchen stove and ice box will come to about $400 and the sink and plumbing to another $100. It will cost $200 to decorate the interior, $200 to install washrooms, and $300 for furnishings, of which $150 will go for a small piano. That leaves $100 for incidentals, most of which will be added after business starts coming in.

Lots of Help Available.

The next item is the help. You will need a bartender, a cook, a waiter, a piano player, and, if the place is to be pretty ritzy, a checkroom girl. But this is the least of the speakeasy proprietor's worries. There are lots of bartenders looking for $20 a week and fairly good cooks who'll work for $30. Waiters will take the job for the tips and what they can chisel, and for the piano player just install a "kitty" box for the sentimental drunks to pitch quarters at.

The checkroom girl, if she's a nice blonde, will take care of her salary selling hats back to their owners, and if business is real good she'll even split with the house. The help then should not run over $50 a week.

Now comes the booze. You get all this on credit and the collector will not be around for a week. Two cases of Canadian bourbon at $65, one 5 gallon can of alcohol t $27.50, five gallons of colored spirits or "junk" for $25, one case of champagne for $84, and one pint of drug store bourbon for $6. That's all you'll need except the beer, which comes at $55 a barrel.

There are 384 shots in a case of bourbon, so at 75 cents a shot you'll take in $288 and make $200, even allowing for the house to buy a few.

Twelve Gallons from Five.

With the five gallons of alcohol twelve gallons of gin are made, the basic ingredient of gin bucks, Tom Collinses, and all sorts of cocktails that sell from 50 cents to $1, so the profits are good here. They are even better on the junk, moco loco, or brown, as the stuff is variously called, at 25 cents the throw. Later on you'll make this stuff up with brown sugar or peach seeds, alcohol, and a charred barrel.

The drug store bourbon is for discriminating customers and you can let them have it at the regular price of 75 cents and still double your money. The champagne is a good thing to have around in case a big dealer comes in and wants to impress his party, the checkroom girl, or one of the hostesses "popping a bottle of "wine." Costing $7 a bottle, it will bring from $15 to $20.

Beer is not a big money maker—you only double your investment on a barrel selling it at 25 cents a glass—but you've got to handle it. The customers demand it when they haven't had anything else to drink, and besides that the syndicate says take it.

Now for the matter of protection. The $55 price on beer supposedly takes care of that, and usually does, the dry sleuths say, so far as the captain of the district is concerned. He's supposed to get $5 and the ward boss $5. The coppers on the beat will make an occasional touch of $5.

After you've been going for some months the license copper will come around and pay you a visit. He's looking for at least a twenty case note to make a satisfactory report to the captain, who must O. K. your soft drink parlor license. You may have to get the precinct captain to call on the police captain and that will mean another $25. The license itself costs $100 for a year.

About the best thing to do about the federal agents is keep the door closed to hostesses and entertainers who want to show off their new boy friends. Next to the depression, this constant fear of the G. men will be your biggest headache.

BUYERS OF WINE GRAPES CROWD MICHIGAN ROADS

Vineyard Owners Selling by Roadside.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Benton Harbor, Mich., Oct. 2.—[Special.]—To this grape country on the east coast of Lake Michigan today came 5,000 Chicago automobiles to be loaded with baskets of the vinous fruit by roadside purveyors. The U. S. 12 highway, which follows the shore from Chicago, was crowded with the cars of wine makers.

The grape buyers came in such large numbers that it looked like an open rebellion against the bath tub gin of the Volstead era. Their vehicles included dilapidated flivvers and expensive limousines. There were also Chicago laundry and grocery delivery trucks with springs depressed by loads of grapes.

Intentions Apparent.

The motorists were buying in quantities too large for the fruit to be intended for jams or jellies, one of the growers pointed out. Running boards and tonneaus of sedans were packed with baskets. Coupes and roadsters had rear decks open and stacked with crates of grapes.

The roadside of U. S. 12 for approximately 25 miles is virtually one big open air market. There's a farmer's stand every two or three hundred yards, so many of them that none was rushed with business, although shoppers were stopping here and there along the route all day long.

In addition to the private cars, trucks carrying tons of grapes crowded the highway to Chicago. The fruit has ripened too rapidly to suspend marketing for Sunday. These slow moving freighters contributed materially to the congestion along the route.

Air Is Perfumed.

The air is perfumed with the bouquet of wine in the drive through this vicinity. Hillside vineyards are purple, leaves having wilted or fallen to expose large clusters of grapes.

Some of the price tags noted at the farmers' stands included baskets holding little less than a peck for 15 or 20 cents. For larger quantities, the wine makers were purchasing their supplies for even less.

Apples, pumpkins and celery were also bought in large quantities today by motorists who combined thrifty shopping with a pleasure outing in the warm sunshine of this first October Sunday.

Seeks a Way to Reopen Closed Baths in Schools

Col. Howard P. Savage, business manager for the board of education, will start out tomorrow on an inspection tour of the fourteen elementary schools in which bathrooms have been closed and the five high schools in which swimming pools have been closed. The facilities were shut down as a result of a school board order, introduced by Trustee Joseph Savage, which abolished the jobs of 47 bath attendants. Col. Savage said that he hoped to transfer bath attendants from other schools where they were not needed in order to reopen the closed bathrooms and pools.

SOVIET RULERS ADMIT FAILURES BUT RAISE AIMS

MOSCOW, Oct. 3.—(AP)—The central committee of the communist party tonight ended four days of sessions held to draft the government policies for 1933 and reiterated that it would be necessary to stress better living standards next year.

Noting that 1933 was the first year of the second five year plan, the committee adopted a series of resolutions admitting serious shortcomings had occurred in the development of public economy, but insisted on improving the quality of production all down the line next year.

Advance predictions that the committee would inaugurate radical changes in policy failed to materialize.

Chicago's .. First Brick Church

The Power for Good

The churches of Chicago have always exercised a powerful influence over the community life of the city. Records disclose an inspiring history of religious activities. Churches flourished from earliest times. The first brick church edifice was built on the corner of Cass and Illinois Streets in 1837, on a lot given for the purpose by John H. Kinzie. Bishop Philander Chase officiated at the dedication which took place on the 25th of June.

CHILE HAILS HER FIFTH RULER IN LAST 4 MONTHS

Judge Takes Office; Revolt Against Army Wins.

BY NORMAN INGREY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, Oct. 2.—Chile's hectic period of barrack bolstered government ended at noon today when Judge Abraham Oyanedel, president of the Supreme court, took over the government from Gen. Bartolme Blanche, the lanky soldier aristocrat, who only a fortnight ago ousted Carlos Davila's socialist régime in behalf of the army. He is Chile's fifth ruler within four months.

While Judge Oyanedel was sworn in as vice president he automatically became provisional president because of Gen. Blanche's resignation.

Last night and early today Chile seethed in an anti-military revolt from Arica on the north to Cape Horn on the south. In Antofagasta, where Gen. Pedro Vignola first raised the standard of revolt and allied his garrison to a united civilian front, preparations were made to resist the naval blockade proposed by the government and to fight against the southern army threat by land.

Crowd Persuades Soldiers.

Farther north at Iquique a crowd of 10,000 had rushed the regimental barracks and induced the soldiers to side with the civil movement. Strict censorship suppressed this information, but late Saturday revolt also burst out in the south.

The Chacabuco regiment went over to the people at Concepcion, refusing to obey orders to fire on a mob clamoring for restitution of a civil régime. Editors ignored the censorship, police refused to obey orders from Santiago and the whole city, with local authorities, joined the civil revolt.

Gen. Blanche announced his resignation before the humiliated officers of Santiago garrison whom he had once promised to cling to power until the Oct. 30 elections. The officers wore business suits to avoid the attention from the hostile crowds which gathered outside, shouting anti-military epithets. The officers arrived escorted by police.

"People Too Insistent."

"I cannot keep my word to you," Gen. Blanche told them. "The people are too insistent. The navy sympathizes with them and the provincial garrisons have gone against us."

The turmoil increased outside and the clash of lances was heard within the government palace. Only blustering Col. Pedro Lagos, whose tank corps was the principal prop of the Davila government, wanted to hold out, but he was bowled down by the majority.

War minister Gen. Luis Otero, at the dictation of Gen. Blanche, drafted an army order advising officers and troops that the entire government of the country was being handed over to the president of the Supreme court, and that henceforth soldiers should attend their barracks and never interfere in politics again.

Cheer Fall of Military.

The military capitulation was greeted with rounds of cheering. Huge processions were organized in the principal avenues. One group, however, stormed the barracks of the Buin regiment at Santiago, alleging that the commander had detained civilian leaders. Shots were exchanged. One civilian was killed and a dozen were wounded when police separated the combatants. Casualties over the rest of the country brought the death toll to about 20, with less than 50 wounded. The civilian government triumphed at comparatively small cost.

This afternoon and evening Chile's new ruler interviewed political leaders with a view to securing cabinet representation for all parties. His selections will remain in office only until the elections, but the triumph of principles that they represent has caused general rejoicing.

Tonight crowds cheered even in front of the American embassy, the much maligned United States being one of the few powers which consistently refused recognition to the long list of revolutionary governments since the overthrow of the legal régime of Juan Esteban Montero last June.

TAX WASTE FOES START WINDOW POSTER DRIVE

Window posters urging voters to "elect representatives who will work for economy" will be put into distribution on a country-wide basis today by the National Organization to Reduce Public Expenditures.

"This appeal is nonpartisan," said George W. Rossetter, general chairman. "In it, as in all our other efforts, we are stressing only two major points. One is that if economic stability is to be restored government budgets and taxes must come down. The other is that this result can be attained only through the election of candidates willing to forget politics and pledge themselves to those economies."

Gassy Stomach of Years Ends

"I've been troubled with gas on my stomach for two years," says Mrs. Frank Steele, Coatesville, Pa. "I tried many things and none have given me such relief as ACIDINE."

"I was very sick in my stomach when I tried ACIDINE," says Andrew Cotton of New York. "I found it to do all that is said for it. I am 64 years old and had been troubled with gas all my life. You don't know how thankful I am that I tried ACIDINE."

End gas, sourness, heartburn, dizziness, sleeplessness, headache resulting from acidity. Maker guarantees ACIDINE ends your stomach trouble or money back. All druggists have ACIDINE.

THE bloom IS OFF THE BARGAIN!

PEOPLE went to Central Park to see the first English sparrow in this country. When he sang "cheep, cheep" women and children thought he was cute. A few years later they thought him a pest.

A couple of years ago when retailers started cheaping, they got a lot of attention. The song was simple, and effective. Everyone could sing it—and almost everyone did.

But the "cheap, cheap" tune is well worn out. Its repetition only induces ennui. New low prices make no sale to most of the customers. The bloom is off the bargain. The bargain had its big day in the first half of 1930. And the people who bought stuff because it was a bargain now know that it wasn't. This country is cluttered up with shirts that do not fit, shoes that didn't last, clothing that only the moths can care for, housefurnishings that are a still unceasing pain in the neck to once proud purchasers. People realize that a few dollars they thought they saved are no compensation for enduring dissatisfaction with the things they bought. And they now want standard merchandise—the old brands, the usual things. They know that prices are down; and when they are too down the item is not what they wanted.

THE MAJORITY of this New York population is still living in the same old way and on the same old income. This majority is the real market—not the submerged minority that must cherish its pennies at any cost, that must save money at the expense of everything else. And to this majority population price is no longer the principal reason for buying, and possibly never was. So the advertising of minimum price ranges is not advertising with maximum appeal. And much newspaper space spent on bottom price ranges is wasted space—because it misses most of the market.

This is a good time to make advertising resume its old function of making people spend money instead of saving it; of selling something people want to buy, not something buyers want to sell; of showing a profit as well as a crowd. This is a particularly good time to use The News.

The News has volume circulation—and makes volume sales. It reaches two-thirds of all the families in New York City; and more than 90% of these News families have incomes of more than $2,000 a year. It reaches more families in every income class than any other newspaper.

The News costs less than it ever did before—1928 rates are subject to a 5% discount for 1932 circulations which have grown 200,000 daily and 250,000 Sunday since 1928.

THE STAGE is now set for selling opportunities.

And The News is set, too.

WE ran a couple of ads where retail advertisers would see them. The ads complained about using advertising to sell too-low-priced merchandise. The retailers liked 'em and wanted proofs. So we reprinted the series. Then lots of people wanted the reprints. So we reprinted the reprint. . . . . If you'd like a copy, drop us a line on your business letterhead.

"The Tribune has been An Important Factor In Our Success"

Kellogg's
BATTLE CREEK, MICHIGAN
September 26, 1932.
The Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois
Gentlemen:
During 1932, our advertising expenditure will be larger than any previous year in the history of the Kellogg Company. By far the greater share is in newspapers. It has, therefore, been a real pleasure to have released to the Tribune all major schedules going into Chicago.
This increased program has been approved, with the feeling that the concentrated power of newspapers makes them most effective in times like these. When business is slow, most aggressive action is needed to hasten the return of normal business conditions.
Our efforts in the Chicago market have been very productive and we are sure the Tribune has been an important factor in this success.
About two years ago the Kellogg Company instituted the six-hour day — with four working shifts in the twenty-four hour day — believing it a constructive step in view of increased unemployment and unsettled business conditions.
We found that the six-hour day enabled us to not only employ about 400 additional persons — but at the same time it increased the efficiency of our production.
In order to take care of this increase, we intensified our sales and advertising efforts — particularly in newspapers. It has been a source of great satisfaction to us that our present business has demonstrated the soundness of the entire plan.
With best wishes.
Sincerely yours,
W. K. Kellogg

STEADY DRIVING—never letting up—putting on the pressure when selling gets difficult—those are the tactics that have won for Kellogg's in this great, responsive Chicago market.

And the backbone of all their advertising effort has been the Chicago Tribune.

Year	Chicago Tribune	2nd Paper	3rd Paper	4th Paper	5th Paper
1929	26,478	28,459	17,937	15,440

First eight months*

Note the consistent increase in the Chicago Tribune . . . an increase that is based on definite results. Such increases are almost the rule with any advertiser who uses the Tribune sufficiently and aggressively.

The outstanding sales successes that have been scored through the Chicago Tribune this year prove the point conclusively. "If you are not in the Tribune, you are not in Chicago."

The very vastness of the Chicago market makes it imperative that your Chicago sales plan should be unquestionably right.

It is almost axiomatic that the Chicago Tribune would not be the world's greatest newspaper if it did not know and cover its market in minutest detail. Yet it is only too evident that many an excellent concern, in driving for more Chicago business, has not taken advantage of the market information the Chicago Tribune can place at its command.

If you want more business in Chicago take the first step to get it—know Chicago as the Tribune knows it. That is the obvious, sensible thing to do. Just a letter or wire will bring the basic Chicago facts to you now—at the very time when they will be most helpful.

"Beyond the Blue Sierra," by Honore Morrow. [Morrow.] Published today.

HONORE MORROW before 1926 was known only as the author of adventure tales and romance set in the west. Among the more successful of these were "Still Jim" and "The Enchanted Canyon."

HONORE MORROW.

In 1926 she left the fiction field and turned to biography, setting herself to the task of writing a Lincoln trilogy, "Forever Free." From biographical fiction Honore Morrow has lately directed her literary talents to the field of the historical novel. "Beyond the Blue Sierra" combines her interests in biography, romance, fact and fiction, and is set in her beloved west. It is an interesting fact that more than 800,000 of Mrs. Morrow's books have been sold.

The setting of "Beyond the Blue Sierra" is in Mexico, Arizona, and California during the years 1775-'76. It was the time when Spain was trying to push her civilization beyond Mexico into California and Arizona to make another New Spain in the new world. Don Antonio Bucareli was the Spanish viceroy, consumed with the ambition to make a port and fortress at San Francisco and lonely as only men devoted to supreme ideals can be lonely.

He longed for his home in Spain, for a different sort of life, but he was loyal to the king and the ideals of the king became those of Don Antonio. Ruthless and fierce, reserved and stern, he neverthless longed for the joys of human intimacy which were, because of his position, personality and aims, denied him.

Capt. Don Juan de Anza, another great leader of men, loyal, honest, unequivocating, passionately determined, dreamed of opening an overland route from Mexico to California. Don Juan's lovely wife, Ana, felt neglected and miserable in the face of a powerful interest with which she could not compete. Hers was the unfortunate lot of women married to men who are helpless and isolated before the demands of their genius.

These two strong male personalities meet and their ideals converge into one grand scheme. Out of this mutual and absorbing interest grows a deep friendship. The plot of this book deals with the struggles and to some extent the real success of the military aims of Don Juan and Don Antonio. Other characters enter to form subplots and background. Alonso, the curious, brilliant lad whose mysterious parentage is never cleared up, though the finger points to Spanish royalty; Juanita Espinojo, his beloved Mexican sweetheart; Dona Ana, the wife of Don Juan, and Father Garces, a missionary whose zeal and unselfishness are almost unequaled in that time, all these characters hold the reader's secondary interest.

The story is well told and interesting, particularly those chapters dealing almost exclusively with pure narrative action and the facts of history as the author sees them. Her penetration into and her dramatization of human relationships may leave something to be desired in the way of inner truth and reality. The handling of the delicate relationship between Don Juan and Don Antonio does not convince the reader that the author is either an effective psychologist or a memorable artist.

"Wild Horses and Gold," by Elizabeth Page [Farrar & Rinehart], is an authentic and extremely dramatic and unvarnished record of the great Klondike gold rush, one of the tragic and glamorous chapters in American history. In this narrative, for the first time as far as we know, the author gives a full and detailed account of the background, the motivation and preparation for the thrilling and futile flight across the continent.

"Gold in Them Hills," by C. B. Glasscock [Bobbs-Merrill], is another true and authenticated chronicle of the west, with the emphasis upon the last wild and fantastic mining days. Besides the straightforward narrative there are interesting and memorable pictures of such now famous men as Senators Tasker L. Oddie and Key Pittman, George Wingfield, Charles M. Schwab, Tex Rickard, Barney Baruch, Frank O. Lowden, and George Graham Rice, as well as others less well known but equally important in the making of western history. M. D.

All American Fashions Shown in Chicago's Exclusive Shops

Two piece suit of forest green wide waled wool. The large double puffed collar and sleeves are of yellow gold fur. The long coat is noticeably new and different.

Shoulder width, achieved with demurely puffed sleeves and a high round neckline accented with the new narrow white collar, together with cherry red buttons in clusters of three, contrast this dove gray thin broadcloth street costume.

ALL American fashions, designed by Hattie Carnegie and made in her own studios, are shown here. They are but a few of the many originals and clever adaptations of French models that this distinguished American designer featured in a recent fashion show in one of Chicago's exclusive shops. Hattie Carnegie models are to be found in many of Chicago's smartest shops. They are all practical, wearable . . . typical fashions for the average American women. The models include suits, frocks and gowns with the inimitable slender distinction that is particularly significant of all Carnegie models.

Long sweeping lines that extend into a train. Two wide, fluffy white fox sleeve bands and shoulder motifs glittering with rhinestones, make a most picturesque evening costume. The long coat is shown over the gown of similar silhouette with rhinestone decoration, but without any of the fur repeated on the gown. Black Bagheera, the season's dullest yet smartest fabric, is used for the entire stunning costume.

MINUTE MYSTERY CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

BY H. A. RIDLEY

Copyright 1932 By News Syndicate Co. Inc.

Dr. Fordney is professor of criminology at a famous university. His advice is often sought by the police of many cities when confronted with particularly baffling cases. This problem has been taken from his casebook covering hundreds of criminal investigations.

Try your wits on it! It takes but ONE MINUTE to read! Every fact and every clew necessary to its solution are in the story itself—and there is only one answer. How good a detective are you?

TRAPPED.

"Killed him just like that," said Inspector Kelley with a snap of his fingers as he removed the cork and smelled the poisonous contents of the bottle. "This is the fastest way out, I know!"

Prof. Fordney nodded and continued his examination of the body while Kelley looked his disapproval of Horel, the suave young man whose call they had answered. No sincerity, just a punk, he said to himself. Aloud he bellowed: "Come on—let's have it, you," his usual good nature irritated by the fellow's complacency.

"There isn't much. Frank's been despondent over heavy financial losses—the market, you know. He'd been talking suicide, so I thought I'd drop in and cheer him up."

"Was the door of his apartment unlocked?"

"It was. Frank put the bottle to his lips just as I opened it, and although I shouted and ran to him, I was too late. He fell to the floor and in a minute was dead. It must be powerful stuff. I was going to lift him to the divan, but remembered and touched nothing."

For the first time since their arrival Kelley noticed signs of nervousness in Horel as Fordney carefully removed the dead man's watch from his pocket.

"Odd—not broken, but it's stopped," he mused aloud, as with a gentle shake he started the timepiece. "Of course, he could have fallen on his face, but—his arm outstretched like that—— Why did you murder him, Horel?" demanded the professor quietly.

New Art Fair Has Something for All Tastes

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

All sorts of cries and ejaculations of interest, surprise, delight and horror are in order on the Michigan avenue block between Chestnut street and Delaware place at the Gold Coast Outdoor Art fair. The fair has substantial patrons backing it, but public interest will be needed to put it over as the biggest, best, and most successful of Chicago's outdoor art enterprises this season.

Some 250 artists from all over the city and suburbs, and from as far away as Iowa, are competing for attention with water colors, oils, sculpture and etchings. The booths are brilliant and gay. A huge figure of a painter, smock and palette complete, has been erected at the entrance to the grounds. A jovial air of good fellowship tingles through the atmosphere. Bohemia at an accessible address beckons.

By night the fair is even gayer than by day. Japanese lanterns supplement the practical electricity.

The crowds have no excuse for not seeing all of the many works spread for their approval. Artists of standing as well as those less well known have put their best foot forward and from Todros Geller with his characteristic Jewish paintings to Tunis Ponsen with his delightful and moderate landscapes and portraits, there is something for nearly every taste.

One of the most effective booths is No. 102, where small sculptures in color by Peggy Sidle, fascinating little dancing figures and Russian ballet characters, are displayed in company with the extremely clever wood carvings of Russell Daniels. Both of these talented young artists are pupils of Viola Norman's Chicago School of Sculpture.

Among the painters who are exhibiting are A. Raymond Katz, William Schwartz, Fayerweather Babcock, Frederick Grey, Peter Paul Koch, John Groth, Ivan Le Lorrain Albright and his brother, Malvin Marr Albright, Julia Thecla, and Frank Follmer.

Mrs. Frank G. Logan, Mrs. Howard Ellis, and Miss Mary Rend are patronesses. Warner Hoople is the director.

Onions, potatoes or other nonperishable food may be exchanged today for a ticket to the Arcada theater of St. Charles, as a feature of Welfare day. Food obtained will be turned over to the municipal food kitchen for the unemployed and needy, managed by Mayor I. G. Langum. Unemployed men who are able to work will be given a week's food supply in return for one day's work on the municipal project of beautifying the banks of the Fox river.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Keep that mirror eye of yours wide open this season. Or a topheavy look will get you, if you don't watch out! With shoulders built up higher and necklines crowding your chin, you're going to need a bit of sharp watching up there. No use dieting your hips off if that first impression is going to be bunchiness up where the observer's eye first lights.

It's to avoid the topheavy look that curls and rolls on the nape of the neck are ordered off this year. It's almost a human impossibility to keep from looking as if you'd been hit on the top of the head and squashed down into your collar when the neck is cluttered with hair, especially with the long hairline over the ears and extending to the collarbones. No can do this year, if you want to look like the girl you believe you are going to be in your Chanel, original or copy.

Those teeny hats that sit perilously on one ear and less than half of the head make a ridiculous picture with hair hanging heavily down around the neck. They don't look any too good with the hair done in a tight knot back there, if the knot is placed low. They call for a pert, impudent, short haired arrangement of hair, with the neck made as smartly lean as possible.

And what pains have to be taken of that exposed coiffure! Better stick to a brim and three quarter head covering, at least, in a hat, if you cannot afford the coiffure upkeep. Anyway, brimmed hats are chic, too. So don't follow, sheeplike, the bellboy hat example of some short haired and smartly curled sister if your hair is worn along other lines. Perhaps these latter may be more becoming.

Stick to the becoming thing, whatever it is, rather than the latest. But trim down that topheaviness, whatever else you do.

Kathryn Louise Evans to Make Debut at Holiday Dinner Dance

Newest Name to Be Added to Ever Growing List of Girls to Be Introduced This Season.

BY JUDITH CASS.

A NEW name to add to the ever growing list of this season's debutantes—Kathryn Louise Evans. She is to be presented by her mother, Mrs. Albert Thomas Evans, at a dinner dance during the Christmas holidays, probably on Dec. 21, at the Casino, but the date and the place are not altogether definite yet.

Miss Evans spent last year with her mother on a trip around the world, and the year before she finished her studies at Briar Cliff. She will not be here for the whole winter this year, either, for she and Mrs. Evans are planning to sail from New York on Jan. 12 for a cruise of three and one-half months to Australia and the South Sea islands and other interesting places, some of which they have visited but want to see again.

Mrs. Evans and her daughter used to live in one of the apartments at 233 East Walton place, but for the last two years they have had a "pied-a-terre" at 179 Lake Shore drive.

Miss Evans is a clever little dancer and she is to dance in the Service club revue, "Stepping High," at the Goodman theater on Oct. 21 and 22, but whether she will be in the chorus or have a solo dance, I haven't heard yet.

Wedding Plans of Polly Perry

The list of attendants for Miss Polly Perry's wedding to Harold Mason Kneedler, on Oct. 23, has been completed. Little Sally Berry is to be her sister's maid of honor and the bridesmaids will be Miss Elizabeth Withington of Cleveland, Miss Ann Covert Meyer of Great Neck, N. Y.; Miss Helen McCormick, and Miss Betty Brown.

Bonney Towell of New York is to be Mr. Kneedler's best man and the ushers will be the bridegroom's brother, Edgar Kneedler, who is coming from college in California; the bride's brother, Brewster Perry, who will come from Culver; her cousin, Edward L. Brewster, and John J. Borland, who will return from Yale for the wedding.

The ceremony is to be performed at 5 o'clock at St. Chrysostom's church and there will be a reception half an hour later at the Casino.

Dates for prenuptial parties are being jotted down now on the calendars of Miss Perry and her friends. On Thursday of this week Miss Jean Schweppe is to be hostess at a luncheon and shower at the summer residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Schweppe, in Lake Forest. On Wednesday, the 12th, Miss Marjorie Horton is to give a luncheon and linen shower at the Lake Forest residence of her mother, Mrs. Samuel M. Rinaker, and on Saturday, Oct. 15, Miss Jane Valentine, daughter of the Joseph L. Valentines, will give a dinner party at her parents' residence at 1322 Ritchie court. Miss Patty McCormick and Miss Betty Brown will give a dinner dance on Monday evening, Oct. 17.

Miss Perry's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, will give the bridal dinner on Friday evening, Oct. 21, the night before the wedding.

Arden Shore Society Elects New Officers.

Miss Elizabeth Alger of Kenilworth was elected chairman of the Arden Shore association at a meeting held on Friday at the Illinois Women's Athletic club. The former chairman, Mrs. Edgar F. Burch, who hasn't returned from her summer travels abroad, was made honorary chairman. Other new officers include Mrs. Herbert Nock and Miss Lura Schreiner, vice presidents; Miss Elaine Blackman, treasurer; Miss Jane Lucey, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Donald La Chance, recording secretary; Mrs. John McLane, chairman of advertising for the annual ball; Miss Helen McNair and Mrs. Lawrence Nelson Jr., tickets; Miss Peggy Glidden and Miss Louise Ruffner, membership, and Mrs. Charles H. Brown and Mrs. James Hadley, invitations. Mrs. Williamson Baaches, Mrs. Richard Gambrill Jr., and Miss Mary Louise Scheffman are directors at large.

The annual ball, which the members are calling "Shadows of Paris," is to be held on Dec. 10 at the Stevens hotel. The Chicago Arden Shore committee realizes its quota annually through this ball and the north shore members raise their contributions through subscriptions. The debutantes each year are invited to join the association and to assist with plans for the ball. Miss Lura Schreiner is chairman of the debutante committee this year. The association will give a tea for debutantes and patrons on Oct. 28.

Service Club Revue Promises Audience Thrills.

The enthusiastic young things who keep us acquainted with the progress of the Service club revue rehearsals report that Mrs. Robert M. Hoffman Jr. (Emily Pope) is to be a star again this year in some specialties designed to exploit her unique talents; that Jimmy White of Northwestern university is to contribute an act; that there will be a "stunning male chorus," some of the members of which are the cream of the Blackfriars at the University of Chicago, and that Edna Doering's "deep, dark colored voice" will positively send chills up and down the spines of her listeners. The revue will be given on Oct. 21 and 22 at the Goodman theater.

Mrs. J. Ogden Armour is expected to return to Chicago on Oct. 10 from the Timbers, her summer estate near Traverse City, Mich.

Walter Byron Smith and William H. Benton are house guests of Miss Kate S. Buckingham at her residence at Lenox, Mass., in the Berkshires. Other Chicagoans enjoying a late holiday in that region are Mrs. Stewart Johnson and her daughter, Catita, who are at the Choate's Mission house at Stockbridge.

Mrs. C. H. Schweppe Returning from East.

Mrs. Charles H. Schweppe and her mother, Mrs. John G. Shedd of Lake Forest, will return to Lake Forest this week-end from a fortnight's stay in the east. Mrs. Schweppe's son, John Schweppe, went east about the

America Wins New Place in Fashion World

Paris Models Lose Some of Their Glamour.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

BUYERS still dash briskly across the Atlantic each season to storm the famous French fashion shows . . . boxes of intriguing French originals follow these fashion wise buyers back home. . . . American women flock to the first American presentations of these models, but a lot of the breathless welcome, a good bit of the old fashioned frenzy about imported French things is missing.

The old unshakable and childlike faith (that only Parisian designers could fashion clothes that were artistic triumphs for everybody who wore them), has been badly shattered, the glamour that surrounded the whispering smartness and distinctiveness of original French clothes is slightly threadbare—because of inventive American dressmakers and equally artistic American designers.

Nowadays we take our French fashions much less blindly, we no longer hesitate to criticize . . . we knowingly choose the costumes that fit our personalities, and discreetly and expertly spurn the stuff that does not.

Talented American designers, with a perfect flair for cutting and sewing seams and draping silhouettes that compliment the American woman better than any one else, are at last being recognized and appreciated by apparel buyers and the great hordes of fashion wise shoppers.

Frocks and gowns, costumes and outer apparel made by Yankee designers create as much of a furor as, sometimes more than, those French things.

The great American shopping public is becoming rabidly patriotic . . . frocks from the American studios of American designers are much in demand. Models are easily recognized, even without a peek at the label.

One of the foremost designers in this country is Hattie Carnegie . . . her models include everything from the chic little daytime frocks that are wrapped around the slim young office gal to the glamorous models that are worn by stage and screen luminaries. Hattie Carnegie is refreshingly distinctive . . . her originals and her clever adaptations of French things are wearable, picturesque, feminine and infinitely flattering and more than "just right" for the average American shopper. Her coats and suits are fitted with consummate art . . . shoulders are expertly fashioned to widen in the 1932 manner, but no hint of the theatrical or bizarre is ever allowed.

She subtly accentuates the dash and freedom of the American woman with gowns that ripple almost fluidly down over shapely hips and long, truly American streamlines, and the result is perfection.

This year Hattie Carnegie has sponsored a fashion show of her own, and in Chicago . . . her own mannequins paraded in front of many interested spectators, showing the lovely new clothes for fall and winter. Every exclusive shop in Chicago has Hattie Carnegie models. The creations in this showing were perhaps the last word in new fabrics, new colors, new color combinations, new designs, new decorative trimmings and significant style trends.

Bishop George Craig Stewart of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago officiated yesterday at the celebration of the 75th anniversary of the Church of the Ascension, La Salle avenue and Elm street. The diamond jubilee of that parish was also marked by the declaration of the rector, the Rev. W. B. Stoskopf, that the expansion policy of the parish will be determined by the return of prosperity.

Father Stoskopf has advocated a plan for the raising of a $75,000 endowment fund through pledges to be paid when communicants are benefited by the return of prosperity. The pledges, taken now, are not payable until the members making the pledges feel the effects of better times. It is reported that one of the wealthier families of the parish has pledged $5,000. The celebration of the diamond jubilee will close on Nov. 6 when Bishop Reginald Heber Weller of Fond du Lac, Wis., will be the preacher. One of the most prominent rectors of the church was the Rev. Father Edward A. Larrabee.

The Murder of Caroline Bundy

By ALICE CAMPBELL.

SYNOPSIS.

Neil Starkey, American biographer, is engaged by Caroline Bundy to compile the life and letters of her late father, a famous English biologist. Miss Bunday is in poor health and acting peculiarly. She has hired a photographer, named Tilbury, as bailiff, and he and his wife, an ill-bred couple, hold a strange influence over her. Natasha Andreyev, Caroline's half Russian niece, acts as her aunt's secretary. She detests the Tilburys. Caroline tells Neil that her father, a man of science, was also a mystic. Caroline and the Tilburys hold nightly meetings in the library. Giles Gisborne, vicar of a nearby parish, and his sister Rachel are friends of Neil's. Neil is attracted to Natasha, but is baffled by her odd behavior. She is giving money to a man she meets secretly. Caroline promises to visit Emily Braselton, an old friend, in Paris. Natasha drives her to London.

INSTALLMENT XIX.

A VALUABLE GIFT.

On Neil's arrival at Stoke Paulton next morning he saw the doctor's brown car before the door, and a moment later learned from Crabbe that the bailiff during the preceding night had been alarmingly ill.

"What's wrong with him?" inquired Neil indifferently.

"Gastric attack, sir—food poisoning, or something like that. Mrs. Tilbury was in a rare state, up and down the whole time, fetching hot water bottles and what not, and along about 10 we had Dr. Graves round. I half believed he was going to peg out, but he's easier now. Won't be up for a few days, I hear—not that it's any great loss to us, if you won't misunderstand me, sir."

For the first time Neil caught a gleam in the dead fish eye which showed very plainly its owner's real sentiments. A faint smile passed between the two.

"No word from Miss Andreyev, I suppose?"

"None, sir—but I didn't expect to hear from her. She won't come near this place, depend on it, unless it's to fetch her clothes."

All Sunday passed without news, and when Monday came both Neil and Rachel began to wonder when the guest would turn up.

"I daresay she's so rejoiced to be in London she'll be in no hurry to leave," said Rachel. "Though I did think she'd drop me a line."

Neil said nothing, so tormented by the picture he had formed of Natasha's week-end that he smoked innumerable cigarets and listened anxiously to the sound of every approaching car. After lunch he inquired at the Glastonbury garage on the chance that the girl had come back without notifying them. The answer received from the fat proprietor was quite unexpected.

"It may interest you to hear that I got what I wanted."

"No, sir, she's not been in yet, and it so happens there's a telegram here waiting for her since Friday. Don't know why it was sent to us. Seems you're not the only one trying to get hold of her. There's a lady been in twice, and a little while ago a gentleman called."

"O, a small, fairish person, with a little mustache. Drives Miss Bundy's old runabout. Name of Pilbury or Tilbury—something like that."

Tilbury! Why should he be asking for Natasha? How, for that matter, was he well enough to get out of bed? It seemed slightly peculiar and a little disturbing.

After dinner that evening Neil made unavailing efforts to fix his attention on a scientific treatise. The vicar was going through the galley sheets of his latest book, Rachel was knitting. Just as the clock struck ten the door opened without warning and Natasha, pale as a ghost, walked into their midst.

All started up, one at least with ill concealed relief. Rachel uttered a glad cry of welcome.

The girl made an effort to smile. There were dark circles under her eyes.

"Well, here I am—what's left of me," she replied, and after standing for a moment with sagging shoulders and a look of utter fatigue, sank down upon the sofa.

"Why, you are worn out! What have you been doing—dancing all night?"

"Walked! But you could have brought the car here and let Saunders send for it."

"I suppose I could. I don't quite know why I didn't . . . O, yes, there was a reason. Saunders was out, only that idiot of a boy looking after things, and he never gets anything right."

"Whisky and soda? Tea? You must have something."

"Thanks awfully. I would rather like some tea."

All this time Neil, his eyes fixed on her, kept wondering what was wrong. This was not mere physical exhaustion. The reaction of nervous shock occurred to him. Now she pulled off her hat and cast it down beside her, without so much as troubling to smooth her hair.

"So Carrie's got safely off, has she?" he inquired.

"I suppose so. I haven't heard anything."

"Why, didn't you see her off?"

"Not actually. She insisted on my leaving her alone from Friday afternoon."

"Hum. That's odd."

The door closed on him. Presently the tea arrived, and Rachel went up to look after her friend's room. Neil was now left with Natasha, who still did not speak to him. She leaned back with closed eyes, so spent that every drop of energy in her seemed drained away. The clock ticked. Neil could not take his eyes from her face. At last, without moving, she spoke in a low voice.

"It may interest you to hear that I got what I wanted."

"No! Not the hundred pounds?"

"More than that. So unexpectedly, too. It almost makes me feel ashamed. You see, it was Caroline, after all. Not that I asked her. I'll tell you how it happened—if you promise to say nothing. All the way up I kept thinking she wanted to say something, but she didn't bring herself to the point till just as she said good-by. I had set her down where she asked to be left, outside the London library in St. James' square. She came round to the front and put a little package in my hand. In it were two £10 notes wrapped round—what do you think? A string of pearls!"

"Pearls?"

"My grandmother's. I'd never so much as seen them. She was quite awkward and confused. Said I ought to have them, as I was young and would wear them, while she never did. Then she said, 'I am doing this now in case anything should happen to me. I'd rather give them to you personally than leave them to you in my will.' Wasn't that funny? Perhaps she doesn't really hate me as much as I thought she did, or else she was trying to make up for the way she's acted towards me lately. I was quite bowled over, almost speechless. The £20 was for Easter . . . . They were nice pearls, small, but beautifully matched. I got three hundred and fifty for them."

"What, you sold them?" Neil felt a little shocked.

"What else could I do? I was ready to collapse with thankfulness. I told you how badly I wanted money."

He was silent for a few seconds. "Then I suppose you're happy?" he remarked conventionally.

"Am I? I'm too tired now to know anything."

Closely studying her, he asked himself where and in what way she had spent the last three days. That they had not been given up to pleasure was only too apparent. His first impression—namely, that she has passed through some shattering experience—returned with increased conviction.

"You got it, of course? Saunders says it's been there since Friday."

"Telegram?" The shadow of some fear dilated her pupils, to be replaced immediately by absolute blankness. "Why, who would send me a telegram there? I heard nothing about it. Maybe the boy didn't know. Well, I'd better go and find out what it's all about." She pulled herself up wearily.

"I'll drive you over in my car. It won't take a minute to get it."

"Thanks, it's good of you."

A short time after this Natasha was handed her message, which she tore open and read with wondering expression.

"Look—it's from Caroline. She must have sent it here, not knowing where else to catch me. Soon after I left her, too."

On the slip he saw the following scrawl:

The locked bag again!

"She had it over her arm when she left home," declared Neil. "I remember thinking how strange to carry two bags at once."

"I know. It was the black bag she kept her money in. I've no idea what was in this one. Have you?"

"Papers, I believe, in your grandfather's writing, though there may have been something besides. Well, shall we look? There's the car over there."

Wampas Guild Ends Quarrel with Fox Lot

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 2.—The row that accompanied the time honored selection of thirteen "baby stars" by the Wampas guild last year has faded into a happy compromise, something after the fashion of Jimmy Cagney's get-together with Warner Brothers last week.

The Wampas (organization of movie press agents) are going to designate the thirteen young actresses whom they figure as the best bets for future stardom again this year, but they have passed the word along that the Fox studio will be certain to have a choice among the chosen thirteen if that studio wishes.

The dispute in 1931 arose when Fox's failed to place an actress among the selections, and Winfield Sheehan, head of the Fox studio, thereupon compelled all members of the Fox company staff who held membership in the Wampas to resign pronto. The Fox plant followed this up by naming three of its own girls as anti-Wampas starlets and named them "Stars of Tomorrow."

The resulting confusion did neither the Wampas nor the Fox studio any good and Fox is now being welcomed back into the fold.

Chic Sale says there is one thing about playing in the movies he wants to insist on. It is that they never make him a star.

Last week I received a request from a reader friend that set me thinking. Said the letter: "I wish somebody would write a story around the idea of 'what to use in place of things you are out of.' By that I mean how much flour to use for thickening if the recipe calls for cornstarch and you are out of it; how to substitute bread flour for cake flour; how much extra baking powder to use if you run out of eggs in baking—and many more hints on cooking substitution of that sort. Would you do it?"

I will, and here they are—a group of suggestions that I believe should help out a great many distraught cooks who suddenly find themselves stared in the face by empty cans, cartons, and bins with the oven lighted and the cake, pudding, or whatnot half way to completion.

First for the leading question—how shall we reconcile flour with a recipe calling for cornstarch—or vice versa? The arithmetic is simple, for cornstarch has almost exactly twice the thickening power of flour, so just one-half as much cornstarch should be used as the recipe calls for of flour. And, accordingly, as is more often the case, flour may be substituted for the cornstarch specified by using twice as much flour as was called for in cornstarch.

Frequently we wish to substitute tapioca or sago for the flour or cornstarch asked for in the recipe—or vice versa. Tapioca has even more than twice the thickening power of flour—therefore slightly more than that of cornstarch. Therefore, less than half as much tapioca will be needed as the amount of flour called for, and a little less than the specified cornstarch.

It is never safe to attempt to use cake flour when you are making bread. No alteration in the recipe will give the needed gluten or strength to the flour which the cake flour does not have. But in making cake when only bread flour is available, substitute two tablespoons of cornstarch for two of the flour for every cup used. This gives a weaker flour and one which will make good cake.

One teaspoon of baking powder is equal as a leavening agent to one whole egg or two egg whites. Do not use the baking powder entirely to replace eggs in cakes, or a husky, unpleasant texture will result. When baking powder is substituted for an egg, the liquid should be increased one-fourth cup for each egg omitted, and the fat should be slightly decreased to give the best product.

If it is necessary to omit an egg in making a steamed custard, it is well to know that one and one-fourth tablespoon of flour, three-fourths of a tablespoon of cornstarch, or four tablespoons of finely crumbled bread are equal to one egg as a thickening agent. Here again an increase of liquid will have to be made.

To make a standard cake into a chocolate cake, add two squares of melted chocolate and omit one-fourth cup of flour, as otherwise the mixture will be too thick. If cocoa is to be used, one-third cup of it may be substituted for the same amount of flour.

When a recipe calls for chocolate, cocoa may be substituted in the proportion of three tablespoons of cocoa to one square of chocolate. One-half tablespoon of additional fat for each square of chocolate omitted should also be added.

When sour milk is used in a sweet milk recipe, add one-half teaspoon soda per cup and stir the batter slightly longer, as the acid in the milk tends to break down the strength of the flour gluten and give too tender a cake.

In substituting baking powder for soda, or vice versa, as a leavening agent, remember that one-half teaspoon of soda has the leavening power of one teaspoon of baking powder.

In substituting powdered sugar when granulated is specified, go by weight, not by measure, for while there are two cups of granulated sugar to a pound, there are three and one-half cups of powdered sugar. A pound of one is just as sweet as a pound of the other. It simply takes more room.

When substituting brown sugar for granulated, use the same amount, but pack the brown sugar in the measure very tightly.

Lemon juice may be substituted in equal amounts for vinegar in making salad dressing. If you lack dry bread crumbs for croquettes, etc., roll ready-to-eat flaked cereals and use instead. When substituting molasses or honey for sugar in a recipe, from one-fourth to one-half teaspoon soda should be added to counteract the acidity; and, since each of these sweetening agents contains about one-third cup of water per cup, that great a reduction of other liquids will be necessary.

First Russian Movie Deals with Snipers

Peace Propaganda Closes with Preparedness.

"SNIPER."

Produced by Amkino.
Directed by S. Timoshenko.
Presented at the Castle theater.
THE CAST.
Captain.....Boris Shlikhting
Private.....Peter Sobolevski

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning.

"Sniper," heralded as "Russia's answer to 'All Quiet on the Western Front,'" is Amkino's first offering for the new season.

While the photography is, in some instances, not up to Hollywood standards, in others it is, and the picture as a whole is a workmanlike and intensely interesting one. It deals with a little known or exploited phase of warfare and is distinguished by excellent acting and direction.

Did you ever hear of a "school for snipers"—where sharpshooters are trained in the deadly arts of camouflage and plugging a man through the eye at a distance of 700 meters? Did you ever wonder what the man who so sinisterly picks off his enemies one by one thinks about?

"Sniper," which is quite frankly anti-war propaganda, is broadminded in its last reel. Here it essays to show you that, while Russia would like peace, she will be better prepared for another war than she was for the last.

As in all Russian pictures, the players seem in deadly earnest. About their work and that of the director is a cry for attention, understanding, that seems almost audible. Believe with them or not, you cannot be insensible to their fervency.

This production has many tense moments, many artistic touches. English subtitles make this foreign talkie—at that there's not much talk—understandable and the film is effectively synchronized with music.

"HERITAGE OF THE DESERT."

THE CAST.

SCENERY: Grand!

ACTING: Character rôles are more effectively portrayed than the straight leads. Miss Blane is pretty and conscientious. Randolph Scott, the new leading man hired especially for "westerns," looks a bit like Gary Cooper—and he's conscientious, too. But somehow neither of the two are convincing and there were times when Mr. Scott seemed pretty ham to me.

PHOTOGRAPHY: Excellent.

DIRECTION: Fair.

STORY: Villains threaten the holdings and happiness of Adam Naab and his ward, Judy. Surveyor Jack Hare to the rescue. Excitement . . . killings . . . hard riding . . . H. E!

AUDIENCE APPEAL: Apparently children are crying for westerns and strong men and women are breaking down and begging for them, if one is to judge from the number that seem about to be produced. Which is as should be. There's nothing like a good, breezy out of door drama to make you forget a lot of things. "Heritage of the Desert" isn't one of the most thrilling pictures of its kind, but there'll be a market for it all right.

See you tomorrow.

Brushes Away Gray Hair Keeps Permanent Wave

Now you can really look years younger. Simply brush away those unsightly streaks or patches of gray. It is so easy to do—and at home—with Brownatone. Over 20 years of success recommend this proved method. With an ordinary small brush you just tint your hair back to its natural shade—whether blonde, brown or black. Guaranteed vegetable. Does not coat the surface. Actually penetrates the hair. Defies detection. No tell-tale, flat "dyed" look. Cannot effect waving of hair.

No need to guess. First cut a lock of hair from your head and apply a little of this famous tint. If Brownatone does not give your gray, streaked, dull or faded hair its natural color, youth and sheen, your money back. Only 50c.

Earl Beatty Decides to Sell Ten Horses.

Our London reporter sends word that Earl Beatty, "one of the hardest riders to hounds of this generation," has decided to sell ten of his horses at the Leicester sales. Within the last year he has suffered two accidents. These and the fact that since the death of his wife, the former Ethel Field of Chicago, there is no chatelaine at his hunting box, have been responsible for his decision.

Collarettes and Muffs Smartest Fur Accessories

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Muffs are back in Paris fashions in a big way. These fur accessories, with collarettes make the majority of fur sets seen in the salons of the big dressmakers of the French capital. Many of these sets combine fur and fabric, and just as many are made entirely of fur.

The size and kind of muff that is to be carried depends on the house that makes it. Mainbocher shows a red fox muff that is at least a yard across. Worth shows muffs shaped like huge doughnuts. Molyneux has muffs that look like fur covered pillows. Redfern has little muffs made by joining two ruffles of fur. Schiaparelli shows large flat muffs of fox. Lanvin has an original muff of cloth and fur made like a small cylinder that is large at one end, and with a band of silver fox at the big end. Maggy Rouff has loads of little cloth and fur muffs like melons and in butterfly shapes.

The collarette that goes with muffs is also greatly varied, but two of the smartest types of collarettes are shown herewith. At the top is Worth's Alaskan seal collarette that is draped up on the left shoulder and fastened with a big gold buckle, with which goes a doughnut muff of the same seal.

Doris Sees Need for New Law to Protect Husbands Like This

By DORIS BLAKE.

"I have been married ten years, any. I haven't had a home dinner in ten years. What shall I do?

"DOWNHEARTED."

Above you have a perfect picture of a disappointed male. Henpecked in the ultra-modern manner, as only the wage earning wife can peck the soul out of a mate earning less than she!

Here, again, you have the picture of what's wrong with some wage earning wives! Not all wage earning wives, by the great majority! But there is a body of them that ought to be pried loose from their jobs and put to tending their homes in efficient fashion, under guard, if necessary.

A poor devil like "Downhearted" hasn't a chance taking his troubles to court! Doesn't his wife earn? Doesn't she earn enough to support herself? Isn't she entitled to spend her earnings as she pleases? That's about what is argued in favor of the wage earning woman when trouble arises in the home. If the husband divorced the woman he'd probably wind up in the alimony brig, financially unable to meet the demands imposed upon him by the court.

It looks as if it's up to the husbands themselves to lay down the law around home. Either this, or pack up and leave for parts unknown.

Yes, we surely do need a law to protect mates who aren't able to protect themselves against the bedevilments of one of these highbanded females.

THE STAGE

Patricia Collinge, who has the leading woman's rôle in "Another Language," at the Harris theater, expects to leave the cast of that play a week hence. She will return to New York to prepare for rôles in other productions—"Just Out," a French comedy to be staged by Rosalie Stewart, and a drama that is in the program of the American Theater society. Miss Collinge's rôle in "Another Language" will be taken by Laura Straub, who has alternated with Dorothy Stickney as the heroine in the New York company.

Walter Hampden began his new tour in "Cyrano de Bergerac" in White Plains, N. Y., last Saturday night.

Other theatrical productions now on tour and definite prospects for the Chicago playgoing season are "The Cat and the Fiddle," a high-grade operetta with music by Jerome Kern; "Springtime for Henry," a comedy by Benn W. Levy, and Jane Cowl in "The Man With a Load of Mischief," a drama by Ashley Dukes. "Springtime for Henry" is a possibility for the schedule of the American Theater society, which opens tonight at the Erlanger with Ernest Truex in "Whistling in the Dark."

Thomas Wood Stevens, former director of the Goodman Memorial theater, and more recently in charge of the St. Louis Little theater, has been engaged as stage director of "The Anatomist," a drama that attracted attention in England last year. It was written by James Bridie, a new playwright of Scottish background, and deals with a criminological episode that caused a sensation in Edinburgh in the early years of the last century.

An eminent physician, needing human material for his dissecting knife, employed a pair of grave robbers, who finally took to murder as a means of earning the doctor's fees. The affair inspired Robert Louis Stevenson's story, "The Body-Snatchers." The cast of this production will include Frank Conroy, as the physician; Molly Pearson, Leslie Barrie, Paula Bauersmith, and George Tawde. C. C.

Child of Three Too Young to Be Called Liar

Fear Prompts Him to Avoid Trouble.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

"Dear Mrs. Bevans: . . . And also will you please send me something to help on the subject of dishonesty in small children. My little boy is 3½ and has recently shown signs of this. Naturally, it worries me considerably and I should like some suggestions on treatment to give. I have been careful not to make anything much of the matter, for he knows nothing of the word 'lie.'

"I believe, upon analysis, that possibly this has been brought about by his desire to avoid punishment when he has done wrong. Could this be possible? Lately I have noticed his unwillingness to tell of something he has done and I have changed my tactics and never scold, as I am ashamed to say I have done before. I feel I am gaining ground. . . ."

This mother has found a usual clue to children's untruthfulness. Fear, according to a recent study, is at the root of 50 per cent of the untruths children tell. It is not always fear of punishment. It may be some other fear, such as fear of disapproval, fear of failure, or fear of ridicule from grownups or other children.

We should not make telling the truth too difficult—so hard that a child is tempted to lie to avoid our displeasure or punishment. This is particularly true when a child is as little as 3½, but it also applies to older children, even to those in the teens. This mother's avoidance of labeling an untruth "a lie" is fine. It is so much better to help a child to work out of such a tendency without an insistence upon moral issues. Morality and the age of 3 have no connection, anyhow. And labels on faults are poor devices for success with children.

And here is an interesting item. I knew one absolutely honest little girl who had never heard the word "lie," and didn't know what it meant until she was almost 9 years old.

YANKS WIN WORLD TITLE; FOUR STRAIGHT

SERIES IS JOKE TO YANKS, LIKE THEIR LEAGUE

It's All Burlesque and Batting.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

It will be hard to restore the solemn character of the world series, which the serious minded element of the baseball business has always loved to refer to as the autumn blue ribbon classic of the national game, after the happenings which closed out the show at the Cubs' ball yard yesterday afternoon.

Playing burlesque baseball, the Yankees won the fourth and final game, 13 to 6, and it might have occurred to some of the baseball executives, with money invested in the business, that the best thing that could happen in their industry would be a general dispersal of the Yankees and the permanent retirement of Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig.

They're Just Too Good.

The Yankees were a menace to business in their own league before the season was half done. They were by no means a great ball club, measured by the scientific standards which fascinate the studious baseball nut, but no other team in their own league was good enough to give them a wrestle.

They then came into the world series against the best team in the National league, whose spirit and intelligence were exceptional and whose pitching staff was advertised as something very special indeed. And, in four games, fraught with fumbles, wild throws, hilarious comedy on the bases, and many other mistakes too subtle for classification in the statistics, the Yankees won with yawning nonchalance and mocking contempt for the Cubs, extending their run of consecutive world series victories over the clubs of the National league to an even dozen since 1927.

This record and the Yankees' mischievous amusement throughout the recent distress of the Cubs seem likely to discredit the league which is known in the business by the trade name of the senior loop. The Yankees had already made merry at the expense of their own league, also known as the junior organization, and when they gamboled toward the tunnel at Wrigley field yesterday afternoon they had created a grave problem for the serious customers to exercise their intellectual muscles upon during the winter.

Here's Problem; Now Solve It!

The problem is this: If the Yankees are a low comedy ball club, with a shortstop who kicks in four runs in four games which are supposed to represent baseball in the highest, and if one of their outfielders is a fat, elderly party who must wear corsets to avoid immodest jiggling, and cannot waddle for fly balls nor stoop for grounders, and if no other ball club in either major league is fit even to challenge the Yankees—well, what?

This is not a frivolous matter and it is the more grewsome because the Yankees, particularly the fat and jiggling Ruth, conducted themselves with unseemly levity throughout the blue ribbon classic, to give its old name for perhaps the last time. Mr. Ruth would not take his responsibilities solemnly and not only he but the entire club of Yankees seemed to regard the challenge of the Cubs as a piece of amusing impudence to be put down with great emphasis but without straining.

What's an Error or Two?

The Babe is no longer agile and he seems unwilling even to trouble himself to work very hard at his fielding. Let the other club make a few runs if they must and he will make them back and raise them a few when his turn comes. And if he doesn't happen to, then the others will. There are often days when the Babe, personally, is not hitting well for some temperamental reason, but there is rarely if ever a day when all of them are unable to hit.

Other ball clubs are not like that. They have a few hitters who are specialists. Subdue them and the whole team is checked. But with the Yankees, if Ruth is remiss, Gehrig takes up the work and if Gehrig doesn't, then that may be Tony Lazzeri's day to hit a home run into the farthest bleachers as he did yesterday afternoon in the ignominious rout of the best pitching staff in the National league.

Babe Entertained Before Game.

The sky was gray and an autumn haze, which might have seemed funereal to some people, hung over the Cubs' ball yard as the Yankees and the home town club began the game.

Babe Ruth, by his two home runs of the third game and his jaunty impudence toward both the crowd and the Cubs, had won the attendance to him and had the naive effrontery to take a stand before the left field bleachers, whose occupants pelted him with lemons on Saturday afternoon, leading them in rousing cheers for Babe Ruth. It was the first incident of the kind seen in the sport business since Joie Ray, the runner of the American Olympic team, hopped up on a chair in a café in Amsterdam and called for three cheers for Joie Ray.

Hits Practice Homers.

Ruth hit a couple of long flies into the right field bleacher crowd during his licks at hitting practice, which may have been portentous of one or more shots into that zone under off-

Get Refunds Tomorrow on Fifth Game

BY ARCH WARD.

Baseball fans holding tickets for the fifth game of the world series scheduled for today but made unnecessary by the Cubs' fourth straight defeat, may obtain a refund of the purchase price tomorrow, according to plans announced last night.

Tickets may be exchanged for cash at the Boulevard Bridge bank in the Wrigley building. Out of town fans are requested to send their tickets to the Chicago National League Ball club, Wrigley building, Chicago, and remittance will be made by return mail.

If there is any change in the above arrangement it will be announced today by Cub officials.

Only a few of the 50,000 spectators were late for the game. The crowd started earlier than it had on Saturday and there was not much delay at the gates.

The greatest jam yesterday came twenty minutes before the start of the game. Ten minutes later, however, the congestion had vanished and at the time play started it was possible to gain admittance without as much as two minutes of waiting in line. Lanes were roped off along the main entrance.

The weather was sufficiently good to bring out purchasers of the several hundred $5.50 upper deck reserved seats which were not disposed of for the first game. There was an increase over Saturday in the sale of the $3.30 standing room in the grandstand.

Warneke gave Cub partisans their first chance to cheer when he retired the Yanks in order after relieving Bush in the first inning.

Frank Demaree, center fielder whose home run with two on put the Cubs out in front, will receive one-quarter of a share of the world series player split. It was the first home run he has hit since joining the Cubs.

Gehrig, the Yank walloper, almost equaled a world series record in the first inning. With the bases filled, he sent Demaree back against the left field bleachers screen to reach up for a drive that lacked only a couple of feet of clearing the barrier. The only series contestant who ever hit a homer with a full house prevailing was Elmer Smith of Cleveland in the 1920 series against Brooklyn.

There was a cry of hope from the Cub partisans when a long fly off Cuyler's bat started sailing toward right in the first inning. The cry increased as Chapman fore back to the fence, but died down with the same speed that the ball descended into the right fielder's hands.

Lazzeri's home run into the right field stands came close to being a putout for Cuyler. Kiki leaped into the air and succeeded in touching the ball, but it bounced off his finger tips into the bleachers.

When Wilcy Moore singled off Warneke to start the fourth inning all the experts in the press box began digging into the statistics. They discovered that the veteran, recognized as the world's worst batter, had made only one hit throughout the 1932 season.

The biggest roar of the day went up from the crowd when Jakie May floated a slow curve past Babe for a third strike in the fourth inning.

The spectators in the boxes had a busy time after the second inning. They had to fan millions of gnats, which swarmed over the premises in their annual appearance.

There was a quantity of bad fielding during the series, but the Cubs' fifth was one of the finest defensive innings ever played. Crosetti started it by tearing almost to the bull pen and careening off the wall as he clutched English's foul. A moment later Cuyler bounced one over Moore's head. Crosetti dashed in, picked up the ball while on the dead run, and threw to first ahead of the runner. Then Lazzeri made a dive to his right to get his hands around Stephenson's liner.

Umpire Bill Klem believes in standing on his rights. When Gehrig came up to bat with two on in the sixth, he asked Klem to move from his position in front of the second baseman. Gehrig claimed Klem was in a spot where he interfered with the batter's vision. The Yanks pleaded for Klem to move, but he refused. Then Gehrig moved him with a sizzling single that put the Yanks ahead.

New York, Oct. 2.—[Special.]—The Chicago Bears played their second scoreless tie in as many National Professional Football league starts today when they were unable to score on Stapleton in their first eastern appearance of the season. Last week the Bears played a 0 to 0 deadlock with the Packers, league champions, at Green Bay.

Neither team made any headway in the first quarter today. The Bears seemed to be holding themselves in, and Grange in particular appeared to be under wraps.

In the third period, with Campiglio leading the charge, Stapleton marched 50 yards, only to miss a first down by inches on the Bears' 13-yard line. Late in the period Stapleton attempted a famous old Yale play, the pass to the phantom back. It lost 37 yards, Johnsos, Chicago end, recovering the ball five yards from the Stapleton goal.

Stapleton rose up here and held Corbett, Joesting and Grange to a net gain of one yard in three plays. On fourth down Grange forward passed to Johnsos in the end zone and the latter fumbled the toss.

In the fourth period a 30 yard gain on a smash through the line by Bronko Nagurski, followed by a ten yard off tackle dash by Grange, carried the Bears to Stapleton's 27 yard line. Molesworth's forward pass then was knocked down in the end zone.

CARDINALS TIE, 7-7

Portsmouth, O., Oct. 2.—[Special.]—The Chicago Cardinals seized their only scoring opportunity today to tie the Portsmouth Spartans, 7 to 7, in a National football league game.

The Spartans outrushed the Cardinals from the start and for the most part fought their battle in Chicago territory. Big Tim Moynihan scored the Cardinals' touchdown in the third period when the Chicago line smothered Mule Wilson's punt on the goal line and Moynihan recovered in the end zone. Lillard drop kicked the extra point.

After throwing away four opportunities, Portsmouth got the ball in midfield late in the second period and began an uninterrupted march to the goal. Cavosie completed passes of 15 yards each to Clark and Mitchell, which, mixed with short stabs, brought Portsmouth to Chicago's one-yard line. On his second attempt, Cavosie smashed through tackle for the score. Glenn Presnell kicked the extra point from placement.

BY JOHN FAN.
[As told to Harvey Woodruff.]

This world series stuff is all blah. I'm a good loyal Cub fan who helped root our team into a championship, and I'm sore. I'm not sore at our Cub players, who I still think are a mighty good, although not great, baseball team, but at the conditions which make them look like dubs instead of Cubs when they fail to win a single game against the New York Yankees.

Only once, possibly twice, has the champion of one league looked more futile against the champion of the other league than in the present series. Are we going to let baseball become a game not of collective skill but a hippodrome in which two freak players can determine the result of a world series in advance?

There was no comparison in quality of pennant competition in the National league and the American league. Interest in the pennant race was all with the Nationals. We saw our Cubs, possessing no great "punch," according to the best judges, showing a fighting spirit and great rallies in their home stand which clinched the pennant, a stand almost unparalleled in its sensationalism in modern baseball. Our pitchers proved themselves. They were good. That was our great hope against the Yankees—that and the hope the Cubs would continue to play the same kind of inspired baseball.

Then look at the Yankees. According to the unofficial averages they did not even lead their own league in batting. They were only fair in fielding averages. Yet they won their own pennant easily enough in a race lacking competitive interest. They absolutely swamped the Cubs by the batting of Ruth and Gehrig, and no pitcher on our staff escaped their onslaught. If it wasn't Babe or Lou it was some one else. But I'm making my complaint against that pair.

Cub pitchers hurled to them the kind of balls they thought most effective, the kind of balls they said they would again pitch under similar

INJURIES BRING DOWNFALL OF BUSH, WARNEKE

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Bad luck, along with the maulling Yankees, dogged the Cubs yesterday when they made their final bid to carry the world series beyond the four games needed to decide it.

Guy Bush, the starting pitcher who fell apart in less than an inning, failed because of an injury he had concealed for two weeks. And Lonnie Warneke, who was tossed in as Bush's successor and took up the job in a way that indicated he was himself, wasn't removed because the Yanks started to hit him. He had to get out when something suddenly snapped in his pitching arm.

Finger Tip Torn Away.

Two weeks ago in the pennant clinching double header with Pittsburgh, in which Bush pitched the decision that definitely settled everything, he poked his bare hand into the path of a batted ball. The tip of the second right finger was ripped away from the nail. But the Mississippian didn't beg off when told he would draw the opening assignment in the series. He went in there and pitched, but the Yanks wore him down, partly because the raw finger tip stole some of his stuff. They wore him down again yesterday, almost before he started.

"Why tell about these things?" he said when one of his teammates made a clubhouse inquiry about the ailing finger after the game. The gasoline station magnate didn't want to give the world an impression he was trying to alibi.

"I can take it and any guy that can't shouldn't be in the business," he concluded.

Lon Injured in Third.

The injury to the Warneke's arm that had withstood the rigors of 22 victories came some time in the third inning when the Yanks exploded four hits. Tony Lazzeri's first homer among them. Warneke continued in the fourth, but the arm by this time was causing him agony. His fast ball, his chief stock in trade, vanished. Manager Grimm then waved him aside and called in Jakie May, who has been hanging around the big leagues for years waiting for a world series chance. The veteran southpaw took the count later, but he did one

OPERATE ON UBL'S LUNG AFTER GRID INJURY IN DRILL

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 2.—(AP)—Myron Ubl, University of Minnesota football player, ill for more than a week, underwent a delicate operation today and was in a serious condition tonight.

The operation, just above the heart, was determined upon when physicians learned that pus has formed around Ubl's lungs. Drainage tubes were inserted in the lungs.

Ubl first went to the hospital because of a fractured chest bone, suffered in practice. He also had influenza, which developed into bronchial pneumonia.

The operation removed all hopes that Ubl might join the Gophers squad this season.

If Golf Rouses Your Ire, Quit, Says Doctor

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 2.—(AP)—Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, believes golf is a better game than football, but that golfers who rage at lost strokes have no business in the sport.

"There is a chance in everything," he said today. "I once knew a pathologist who laid down and cried when he missed a putt. Think of that! He hadn't any business playing."

"But golf," he explained, "is as harmless as any athletics for a man over 40. I never knew but two men who died on a golf course. One was struck by lightning and one died when he made a hole in one."

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The New York Yankees are baseball champions of the world, and the Chicago Cubs, so recently outspoken in questioning their supremacy, are reduced to a whisper, or less. The Yankees reserved their most crushing victory for yesterday's finale, played before 50,000 at Wrigley field. After jollying the Cubs for half of the game, the brutal New Yorkers did some serious bearing down to turn in a 13 to 6 decision and sweep the 1932 world series in four games.

Yesterday's triumph was the American leaguers' twelfth straight in world series play, they having swept the series with the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1927 and the St. Louis Cardinals in 1928.

Hammer Four Pitchers.

In giving the Cubs the farewell blistering the Yankees hammered four of the five pitchers Manager Charley Grimm sent forth to stem the tide. The Yankees made 19 hits, including two homers by Tony Lazzeri, who never made a world series homer before, though he had played in three prior to the sad one concluded yesterday.

Lon Warneke was the victim of one of these and Burleigh Grimes was the victim of the other in the ninth. Combs also nicked Grimes for a circuit smash in that rather pathetic ninth inning blast on Grimes, hero of the 1931 world series.

Other world series decided in the minimum of four games have, obviously, been eminently decisive, but it is doubtful if any world title contender ever was so consistently devoid of class as the Cubs proved to be in the struggle with the Yankees.

Never Regained Form.

The team crumbled immediately after clinching the pennant on Sept. 20. The Chicagoans kidded themselves that they were relaxing from an arduous campaign in their own league and would snap out of their doldrums come the world series. But the letdown was irreparable. The Cubs realized their "resting" process had been a mistake as soon as the Yankees had taken the first whack at them. The panic was on and the Cubs went through the four games, utterly dazed at every turn.

Occasionally they had lucid spells, but never long enough to cause any annoyance to the Yankees. Yesterday's lucid span came in the first inning, when the Cubs made four runs after Warneke had pulled them out of a jittery jam into which the excited and quavering Guy Bush had precipitated them at the outset of the show.

Five Hits in First Inning!

In their first inning the Chicagoans made five of their nine hit total, all off John Allen, who led American league pitchers on percentage this season. In this lone flurry the Cubs made four runs, three of them on a home run by Frank Demaree, rookie outfielder, who was voted a quarter share in the Cubs' now famous division of the losers' end of the world series.

English and Stephenson were on base as a result of singles when Demaree drove the ball into temporary bleachers over Waveland avenue. Grimm then got on base on the first of Frank Crosetti's two errors and scored on singles by Hartnett and Jurges.

This big and surprising Cub inning kept the spectators entertained for quite a while and made the affair interesting because the Cubs were able to stay ahead through the fifth inning despite Lazzeri's first homer with one on in the third inning and other Yank sallies that fell just short of clicking.

Raspberry Chorus Opens Up.

While the Cubs were ahead their heartsick admirers perked up to make a little noise in behalf of their faded heroes, although they realized, of course, that all the Cubs had to do was beat the Yankees four straight. But when the game came into its final stages the spectators engaged in a raspberry serenade the like of which has not been accorded the home team at Wrigley field in these many seasons.

The series set or tied many records, despite its brevity. Many of these, of course, were hung up by Babe Ruth, starring in his tenth world series. But there were others in which the two teams shared. For instance the Yanks' 19 hits yesterday, combined with the

LADY LUCK HAS ONLY SMILES FOR OWNER O'BYRNE

His Best Horse? He's Jockey Melvin Calvert.

BY FRENCH LANE.

John J. O'Byrne, a little man of the turf, hasn't suspected that he might suddenly leap into the limelight and become one of the most talked about persons at a great metropolitan racing center like Chicago.

He's been around the race tracks for many years and he's had the average breaks of the game—some of the breaks went in his favor, most of them against him.

So to come suddenly into the spotlight almost has Mr. O'Byrne pinching himself. He is not quite convinced whether or not he is asleep and dreaming. When most fellows reach the age of John J. O'Byrne they are going down the ladder rather than reaching for the very top of it.

It's Different This Year.

As a horseman no one ever has questioned O'Byrne's ability. He got his schooling from Hildreth, Rowe and other great conditioners of thoroughbreds years ago. He's gone right along and conditioned horses ever since, but the breaks simply wouldn't come his way. For years he arrived in Chicago in the spring with a bad band of platers and departed with an even worse band in the fall. Horses wouldn't win for him. The breaks of the game were forever going in the other fellow's direction.

But not this year.

Dame fortune is smiling at Mr. O'Byrne and as the Chicago racing season nears the end many folks—lots of them "good time Charleys"—are shaking him by the hand and whispering in his ear. He hardly knows which way to turn. But don't forget he's not a green hand around a race track.

His Best "Horse" Is Calvert.

The best horse in the O'Byrne stable this year has been Jockey Melvin Calvert, who has been taught horsemanship as O'Byrne learned it years ago.

Willie Travers was here from the east with a useful string of racers, including Little America. Calvert's rides caught the fancy of Travers' eye. He took first call on the kid. Travers got Little America ready for the races. O'Byrne told Calvert how to ride her. Victory after victory was rolled up. She won 10 races in a dozen starts.

O'Byrne bought and developed other horses. His latest development is Sweeperman, which gives more promise of becoming a great route runner than any juvenile that has raced in Chicago this year.

Kentucky's foremost horsemen are beckoning him to bring his horses and Calvert to Latonia. Eastern turfmen are motioning to him to proceed to Maryland.

In the meantime O'Byrne's horses and Calvert are winning. The money is rolling in. Thus Mr. O'Byrne will do the chores out at Lincoln Fields until the close of the season next Saturday.

Consider the Mole: He Builds Subway in Just One Night

BY BOB BECKER.

Rock gardens filled with flowers and plants are an attractive feature of thousands of homes in Chicagoland. These garden plots draw many birds and small mammals in the course of a season. There is a small rock garden close to our house which even has had such an interesting visitor as a salamander. But it appears that this particular rock garden is too close to the house and the world's series baseball broadcasts coming from the living room. A prairie mole was drowned in the pool of water in this garden. The animal had no chance after falling in the pool. The walls were too steep for his clumsy feet to grip. The significant thing is that this accident occurred the evening after the Cubs had lost their second game in the world series.

Residents of Chicagoland frequently may see the irregular ridges of earth which mark the course of the mole's underground passages, but rarely does one get a chance to handle one of these curious little animals. About five or six inches long, covered with soft velvety fur, possessing forefeet that are especially adapted for digging, the prairie mole is a tunnel engineer which spends almost its entire life underground. Day after day it burrows and digs. Usually it passes along just below the surface, so that one easily can mark its track across a lawn. In dry weather the mole may have to go deeper to get insect food.

Although one may observe its underground trail on a lawn, unless one excavates part of this tunnel and deliberately sets a trap for one of the animals there is scarcely a chance that one may see this curious creature. The mole which plunged into the pool of our rock garden was the first we have seen near the house in five years although we have known that moles were digging in the vicinity.

The extent of the underground tunnels excavated by moles is amazing. One scientist tells us that he has traced a fresh made burrow for nearly 100 yards. A mole will tunnel across a good sized lawn in one night. As a subway digger this little animal is a fast worker.

The mole builds a nest underground, and frequently the homes are of large size. While trapping both moles and shrews for museum collections we have often wanted to see if we couldn't find one of these nests, but we never have seen one in the course of our field work. However, scientists who have located them state that a system of galleries and subways lead to the mole nest, the regularly traveled routes being of larger size than those made when the mole is searching for food.

STAGG, 70 AND FIT, RETURNS TO YALE THIS WEEK

Amos Alonzo Stagg, Yale '88, will lead his 41st University of Chicago football team into New Haven this week-end for a game which he expects to win.

Yale came to the Midway last year to celebrate Stagg's 40th anniversary as Maroon coach. The celebration was a debacle to the extent that Yale and Albie Booth trounced the noted alumnus and his team, 27 to 0. That event is safely gone, but it is not forgotten, and Stagg, now turned 70 years and hardly begun to fight, believes he can take some of the sting out of the affair in next Saturday's game.

Marked improvement in Chicago's caliber of play is due less to new men than to the improvement of the veterans, however. The back field is the brightest spot, with eight capable men and a sufficiency of speed and weight competing for service. The returning back field veterans are Vin Sahlin, Don Birney, Pete Zimmer, Al Summers, and George Mahoney.

Ravenswood Ties Brickies, 3-3, in Soccer

The Chicago Brickies and the Ravenswood Scots played to a 3 to 3 tie yesterday at Kuppenheimer stadium in the first meeting between these two teams in the Professional Soccer league.

Greenlees and Cuthbert scored for the Brickies in the first period for a 2 to 0 lead. The Scots pressed in the final period and Campbell scored Ravenswood's first goal. Campbell added another a few minutes later from the spot kick. Greenlees put the Brickies in front with another score, but Baillie tied the count for the Scots. Lineup:

The Spartas, last year's league champions, won their third straight victory by defeating the Jugo-Slavs, 5 to 0. There was no scoring in the first period and the Jugo-Slavs checked the champions until the final fifteen minutes of play when Turik, Wick, and Stevenson found the net for five goals. Tomick, Slavs' half back, was removed for roughness.

FRIEDMAN'S TWO PASSES DEFEAT BOSTON, 14 TO 0

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 2.—(AP)—Benny Friedman threw two short passes to give his Brooklyn Dodgers a 14 to 0 victory today over the Boston Braves in the first American Professional Football league game in this city.

Friedman completed a 25 yard pass to Jack Grossman for the first score in the first period and the Dodgers put over their other touchdown in the third period after a Boston fumble was recovered on the Braves' 25 yard line.

Packers Whip Giants, 13 to 0, Before 5,500

Green Bay, Wis., Oct. 2.—[Special.]—The Green Bay Packers defeated the New York Giants, 13 to 0, today before 5,500 for their second league victory.

Englemann started the Packers on the road to their first touchdown midway in the opening quarter, when he raced 25 yards around left end to the Giants' 33 yard line. Lewellen made it first down on the Giants' 25 yard line in two plunges. Lewellen gained 18 yards on a spinner and two plays later McCrary scored the touchdown on a delayed buck. O'Boyle added the extra point.

Green Bay's second touchdown came in the fourth quarter on an 18 yard pass from Herber to Dilweg, who was chased out of bounds on the 2 yard line. The Packers lost five yards on a penalty and four more on a line plunge, but on two downs Bruder crashed over center for the score. Grove failed to convert after the touchdown.

The Packers scored seven first downs to the Giants' four, gaining 136 yards from scrimmage to the Giants' 20.

SO THE YANKEES TOOK THE TITLE AND SANG A BIT

'Happiest Man in World,' Says McCarthy.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

It was Joe McCarthy, manager of the Yankees, speaking as his players, delirious with excitement after their fourth straight victory, surrounded him in the clubhouse, shaking his hand, and pounding him on the back.

"I figured we could do it," McCarthy said. "We simply had too much power for them. I am proud of the Yankees; proud of them as players and as men.

"We beat a good ball club. The Cubs must have been good to win the National league pennant the way they did. But we had a better team. Any club looks bad losing four games in a row. The Cubs are game. They proved it."

Then They Sing.

In popped Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, to extend his congratulations. He was joined by William Harridge, president of the American league. They shook hands all around, giving particular praise to McCarthy.

"Boy, what a victory," Ruth yelled.

Hot Towels for Babe.

By this time Ruth's arm was paining him so much that he sought relief by applying hot towels.

The players lost no time in stripping off their uniforms and tossing them into trunks as they had less than two hours to pack up at their hotel and catch their special for New York at 6 o'clock. The real whooping it up party was saved for the trip home.

The entrance to the Cub clubhouse after the final play wasn't the entry of a score of athletes bubbling over with joy. Neither was it a funeral march, as some might suspect. The boys knew they had been beaten by a superior foe and that was sufficient consolation.

Grimes Give Last Bellow.

Only Burleigh Grimes, who is that way, was bellowing lustily. He berated newspapermen who had dared to point out the team's weaknesses in the first two games. Mr. Grimes had just emerged from having his ears pinned back for the second time, making him the grand pitching flop of the series, so his storming was excusable. He probably will not be around next spring.

Manager Grimm's attitude was that of a man who was satisfied that the best possible had been done.

"That's that," he declared as he walked into the clubhouse, giving his glove a nonchalant toss into his locker.

"Look at this," he said, pointing to his ribs showing through his shirt. "I've lost twenty-two pounds since taking the manager's job and if anybody thinks it has been easy they can guess again."

Charley Consoles Players.

Some of the fellows seemed to be overdepressed and Grimm yelled over to them:

"We won together and we lost together. It's no disgrace to lose to a ball club like that. Give credit where credit is due. They've got more power than I ever saw before in one place. You fellows gave me all you had, you damn right you did and I know it."

And then with the flick of a cigaret Charley declared, "I'll get out the fish poles now and go fishing."

He'll do that near the Missouri farm he calls home. The manager will try to get away today as will most of the players who live in other parts. Charley Root is the only one destined for a long journey. He'll visit his old home at Middleton, O., and then motor to Los Angeles to catch an Oct. 28 steamer that will take him and members of his family on a two months' cruise to Australia.

Jakie Has Regrets.

Jakie May's pitching to Ruth in the latter's first two appearances against the southpaw was classical, but it didn't satisfy the veteran. His regret as that he couldn't have faced that same team three years ago while he still had his stuff. When he fanned Ruth the first time it was on a fast underhand sinker. Two more of these proved good for strikes when Ruth showed up again and the third strike was a curve ball outside.

But when Ruth faced May for the third time he singled to right. "And he hit the thing safely off the handle of his bat. How you going to beat a team that can do those things? You pitch to them perfectly and they hit anyway," he said rather mournfully.

Demaree Hits High Ball.

The ball Lou Gehrig hit for a single, driving in two runs and putting the Yanks ahead in the sixth, was an underhand curve over the outside edge.

"He didn't even hit it squarely, but it went safe," added the disappointed Jake.

The ball Frank Demaree hit over the left field wall with two on in the first inning was a fast ball fairly high. That was all the Yanks wanted to know about the rookie from the coast league. Thereafter they kept the pitches low.

Yankees Crush Cubs, 13 to 6, for Sweep of World Series

The Yanks had made definite plans to close the series yesterday, including the arrangements for their return to New York on a 6 o'clock train last night. All of the players had packed their satchels and the luggage had been sent to the La Salle street station before the game. The Cubs had avoided any packing, fearing it would be interpreted as a surrender.

The Cubs who linger while they recover from the shock of the series outcome will have the solace of the loser's end, which is considerable, although nothing like the $8,000 or $9,000 shares they and their wives had visualized in contemplating the winners' end, based on capacity crowds here and in New York. The Chicago attendance was up to expectations, but the empty seats in New York brought about a revision of the Cub players' winter budgets even before they were reconciled to taking the short end of the purse.

Hope for Better in 1933.

The National leaguers also had the consolation that they are not as bad a ball club as they looked throughout the series and that with three or four replacements will be ready to regain some of their lost prestige when they get into their 1933 campaign.

The fellows, game to the core, naturally want to have another shot at the Yanks a year hence. At that time Babe Ruth will be a year older, the Cub pitchers realize, and there is always the chance that Lou Gehrig and Tony Lazzeri will be taken down with the hives, or something.

The Harrowing Details.

Which brings us up to the point of supplying the horrid details of how the Yankees wound up the series. Bush, who opened the series and had mapped out a campaign to defeat the Yanks, based on his experiences in the first game, was given a chance to work out his revamped strategy.

But something went awry at the very start. Combs opened the game by hitting the first pitch for a single over Bush's head. Then Guy made his second pitch of the day. Sewell cracked it for a single to right. Combs stopping at second. Ruth was hit on the arm by a pitched ball, causing Ruth to flick at his sleeve in a derisive tableau to indicate the ball hadn't been thrown hard enough to hurt him. This filled the bases.

Gehrig followed with a long fly which Demaree caught off the bleacher screen in left center. This fly enabled Combs to score and the other runners to move up. Though Guy tried to pitch to Lazzeri, he walked him, filling the bases again. Out went Bush and in came Warneke. Dickey grounded to Jurges and Sewell was out at the plate, Jurges to Hartnett. The inning ended when Herman threw out Chapman.

Demaree Hits Homer.

The Cub first started with Herman's pop to Crosetti. English then grounded over second and although Lazzeri knocked down the ball with a backhand stab, he could not recover in time to get Woody at first. Cuyler sent a long fly to Chapman for the second out, but Stephenson lined a single to center, putting English on third.

Demaree, who had started in place of Johnny Moore, who had failed to get the ball out of the infield in the two games he played, stepped up and cracked Allen's first pitch for a homer which came down high in the temporary bleachers beyond the left field wall.

Grimm shot a grounder to Crosetti, but the ball went through Frankie's heels for his first error of the day and his third of the series. Hartnett drove a line single to left center, putting Grimm on third. Jurges then singled to right center, Grimm scoring and Hartnett stopping at second. Wiley Moore, obtained from the Boston Red Sox on waivers in August, relieved Allen and made Warneke lift a fly to Combs.

Cuyler Touches Homer.

Both sides went out in order in the second inning and Warneke got rid of Sewell and Ruth on infield efforts to start the third. Gehrig then caught Stephenson playing far toward center, so placed a double to the spot where Stevie generally stands. Lazzeri followed with a drive to right. Cuyler ran to the screen and made a leap for the ball, but it hit his glove and caromed into the stand for Tony's first world series homer of all time, scoring Gehrig ahead of him. Dickey singled to center and stopped at second on Chapman's single to left, but the inning ended when Crosetti bounced to English, who stepped on third to force Dickey.

In the Cub half of the third Grimm doubled to left center with two out, but the threat ended when Moore grabbed Hartnett's smash and threw him out.

Warneke Leaves Scene.

Warneke went away in the fourth. Wiley Moore opened the inning with a single to center, his second hit of the year. Combs walked, whereupon Lon was waved from the scene and May glided into the arena. Sewell popped to Jurges, and there was much cheering when Ruth was called out on strikes after three pitches. Gehrig was out, Grimm to May.

Jakie waded out of another jam in the fifth. Lazzeri opened with a single to left. Dickey filed to Demaree, but Chapman walked. Then Crosetti hit into a double play.

The Yankees took the lead in the sixth. After Moore had fanned, Combs walked and stopped at third on Sewell's double to left center. Ruth again fanned on three pitches, but Gehrig rolled a single past Herman, Combs and Sewell scoring. Lazzeri flied to Demaree.

Crosetti threw out Demaree to start the Cub sixth. Grimm then beat out a high bouncing single to Gehrig and reached second when Gehrig threw the ball away trying to toss to Moore on first. Hartnett caromed a grounder off Sewell's glove to Crosetti, who threw the ball high over Gehrig's head into the Yankee dugout, Grimm scoring and Hartnett taking second. This made the score 5 all. Jurges fanned and May was thrown out by Lazzeri.

Blast That Wrecked Cubs.

The seventh witnessed the blast which wrecked the game for the Cubs. Dickey opened with a single to Herman. Chapman flied to Stephenson, but Crosetti doubled to right center, Dickey stopping at third. Ruffing batted for Moore and was given an intentional pass, filling the bases. Combs singled to left, Dickey scoring. The bases remained full. Sewell singled, scoring Crosetti and Hoag, who ran for Ruffing. Combs stopped at third. Ruth singled to right, scoring Combs and putting Sewell on second. May hit Gehrig with a pitched ball, filling the bases.

That was all for May. Tinning came in and Sewell was forced at the plate, Tinning to Hartnett. Dickey, up the second time in the inning, was called out on strikes.

Tinning didn't let the Yankees get the ball out of the infield in the eighth. The Cubs filled the bases in their eighth, but the inning ended when Pinch Batter Hemsley was struck out by Pennock in a manner not dissimilar to the way Pennock fanned him Saturday. Stephenson opened with a single to left and Demaree walked. Grimm flied to Chapman and the bases were full when Sewell fumbled Hartnett's grounder. Jurges flied to Chapman. Then Hemsley put on his whiff number.

Grimes' Sad Ninth.

Then came Grimes' sad experience in the ninth. Combs opened up on Burleigh by smacking his first pitch for a homer into the right field bleachers. Sewell and Ruth gave Grimm a workout with a pair of hot grounders. Gehrig walked. Lazzeri rapped homer No. 2, a drive into the center field stand, scoring Gehrig ahead of him. Dickey singled to right center and took a base on Demaree's poor handling of the ball. Chapman doubled to left, scoring Dickey with the Yank's 12th and last run.

Herman opened the ninth with a single, went to second and third unmolested and scored while Lazzeri was throwing out English. Cuyler fanned and Stephenson flied to Chapman to end the series.

Let's Sign Up Ruth, Gehrig, or Bar 'Em

circumstances, and the Yankee sluggers knocked them over the fences. Is it the "rabbit ball," designed to bring customers through the turnstiles? Is baseball to be sacrificed to the gate? O, I admit I am humiliated, all right, and maybe if I lived in New York I'd feel differently, but aren't those the facts?

Why do we have a world series? It's to determine a championship and the superior team. Does it? I don't think the Yanks are four games to none better than the Cubs. Two-ninths of their team is. The rest are not. Yet all next year I've got to endure gibes from south siders, and it cost me $13.20 for two games to see how it was done. So the league that really played the most interesting baseball all season is in a measure discredited until the next world series at least, by conditions which it seems impossible to meet.

Those tickets cost too much, too. It's all right to charge it because they can get it, I suppose. Who get's the money? There's a players' pool for players already well paid for their yearly efforts. Fifteen per cent goes to the extravagant government of baseball which could be just as efficient for one-tenth the cost. In a four game series the club owners make nothing. I think you'll find the Cub club actually lost money because of the expense of erecting those extra bleachers. They would have been about even or perhaps slightly ahead if five games had been played. That's because the players took most of the receipts for the first four games. So the club owners didn't make any money and I paid four times what seats cost me durihg the season to see my good team beaten.

So I want this world series either abolished or played under such conditions that a team like the Cubs can win it, which is the only fair way for it to be played. But if they wish to continue this series under the present plan and won't listen to my protests, I want President Veeck to sign a Babe Ruth and a Lou Gehrig. Then we'll have a chance and baseball will be all right again.

McCarthy Gets His Revenge in a Great Big Way

Joe McCarthy has been revenged. As his thunderous Yankee brigade clubbed the Cubs into submission for the fourth straight game in a one sided world series, McCarthy's dreams of a comeback against the club that pitched him from its managerial throne just two years ago were realized. He had returned in the uniform of the enemy in the world series and administered one of the soundest lickings in the history of the show.

Wrigley field, where the Yankees were crowned champions of the world, has provided an odd setting of fate for the square-jawed leader of the Yankees. At Wrigley field he received his first chance to pilot a Major league club. As manager of the Cubs he rose to fame. Then in September, 1930, his baseball world suddenly crumbled. He was released as manager to the astonishment of even the closest followers of the team.

That winter he signed as manager of the Yankees. It wasn't until the opening of the world series at Wrigley field, the third game of the series, that he even stepped back inside the park.

But not once during the series did Joe mention his past differences with the Cubs. To mention that angle ended every interview. Whenever it was brought up, he was silent. It was no great secret that he was released because he didn't make a better showing with the Cubs in the world series against Philadelphia in 1929.

"We must have a winner, a world's championship team," said the late William Wrigley Jr., owner of the club, in explaining the move.

EACH CUB'S CUT ALMOST AS MUCH AS EACH YANK'S

The world champion Yankees and their Cub victims failed to break the record for the biggest player melon in the world series, but this year's was a bumper of the $363,822.27 variety.

The Yanks will receive a team cut of $152,805.35 while the Cubs get $101,870.24. On the divisional man to man basis, each Yank will receive $5,010 for four days' work. Each Cub's share will be almost as high, each full share amounting to $4,244.59, for the simple reason that they weren't as liberal in cutting their melon as their conquerors.

While the Yanks split their profits into 30½ shares with $2,700 to the club house man and to two bat boys, the Cubs divided theirs on a 24 share basis, leaving former Manager Rogers Hornsby out altogether.

The record for a players' pool in the world series was established by New York and the St. Louis Cardinals in 1928, the cut reaching $419,736.60. In 1929 the players' share was $388,086.66 with the Cubs and Philadelphia Athletics in the big split.

On the agreement of the player pool division, the second place teams in both leagues, the Athletics and Pittsburgh Pirates, received $29,786.67 for each team. Washington and Brooklyn, third place winners, receive $18,174.44 each. Cleveland and the Philadelphia Nationals each will be rewarded with $6,612.33 for finishing fourth.

Series a Joke to Yanks, Like Their League

The marching band of the Chicago Board of Trade post of the American Legion, winners of the hoofing and tootling championship in open competition at the national convention of the Legion in Portland, performed a repertoire of brassy airs, including the inevitable "Happy Days Are Here Again," before the march to the flagpole to play the anthem and raise the colors. There is no local equivalent of the Board of Trade band to play at world series shows in New York and the visiting athletes, experts and customers were fascinated by the precise footwork and the martial trappings of the ex-soldiers.

O, See the Funny Man!

The wretched Cincinnati nut who has been offending the customers' sensibilities at world series shows in St. Louis and Chicago for several years with pathetic antics intended to imitate the hilarious pantomime which Altrock and Schact used to perform every autumn was a more pernicious nuisance than ever. Attired in a witless, pointless suit of soiled pongee hung over with badges, brassards and celluloid buttons, the utterly unfunny pest from Cincinnati parades the aisles addressing the customers with remarks so stupid that they hurt and, for his climax, amid deep silence from the 50,000 customers, ran the bases, concluding with a sprawl such as a brat child of the show off age would do.

The boys who tour the National league with the ball clubs state that he attached himself to the Reds several years ago and persistently adds his presence to the manifold irritations of the Cincinnati customers on all days at Redland field, which, by any stretch of the imagination, could be called gala.

Yankees Ready to Leave.

The journalists and guests of the Yankee management on the special train all had checked their baggage at the station on the way to the baseball links and were poised for a dash to La Salle street station with never a doubt the Yanks would close out the show in four straight games. Mark Roth, the traffic manager, had closed out the account at the hotel and two crews of dining car stewards were waiting at their stations in the diners in the yards with corkscrews ready for the popping of the first cork.

There was hilarity on the special cars as the Yankees broke training and left for New York. They had taken Chicago in a romp and having taken the town they couldn't get away fast enough.

The closing game drew about 50,000 customers who saw a few flashes of brilliant orthodox baseball, but, much more interesting, saw the closing episode of the solemn world series won by a team of punching champions who hadn't much defense but played by the naive theory that the way to win ball games is to make more runs than the other team.

MIDWEST FARMS SEEK MARKET OF DISTANT RIVALS

Products from Afar Sell at Premium.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Chicago food markets, with the second largest volume of trade in the world, are drawing daily upon the food producing areas not only of the fertile middle west but also of other nations in remote parts of the globe.

The necessities of life, for the most part, are supplied a population of more than ten million people in the metropolitan region from the farms within easy marketing distance. Yet farmers close to Chicago are constantly seeking new products they may produce to gain the market supplied by distant farmers with whom an indirect competition is constantly waged.

West Coast Sends Apples.

What then are some of the products we now get from these distant points that offer consideration for the nearby farmer? Has the latter overlooked a source of revenue in letting orchards die when apple growers can ship their quality products from Washington and Oregon and obtain profitable prices?

Thousands of acres of hill country in southern and western Illinois, as well as in Michigan and central Indiana, support well managed orchards. Yet lack of some points in a marketing program have kept their owners from meeting Chicagoland's eating apple market.

Last week in Chicago the poultry and butter industry held its annual convention and brought out the fact that midwest poultry men may supply the freshest eggs from well fed flocks, yet a standardized light yolk egg in a white shell, graded and available in dozen or carload lots, brings good prices to Pacific poultry men when shipped to Chicago or New York. Corn belt farmers, they said, have a market waiting for a higher quality of product, more uniformly packaged and marketed.

Opportunity in Turkeys.

These same men point out that while the bulk of the nation's turkeys come from the ranges of Texas and the northwest there is no more salable product than the northern young tom. Michigan farmers have mastered the job of feeding turkeys in close quarters without heavy losses. But turkey growing in the Chicago region, on a quality basis, is still a rarity.

And what has become of the nut trees within a five hour drive of this great nut consuming metropolis? Chestnut trees are on the same tragic trail taken by the extinct carrier pigeon. Hickories are being allowed to die. Hazelnut bushes on hilly land yield to neglect when winter pruning, fertilizing, and a summer spray would produce at least enough to pay taxes on the pasture land.

BOMB INJURES 4 OF LEGISLATOR'S FAMILY IN CUBA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, Oct. 2.—Four members of the family of Representative Fidel A. Cainas, Havana Conservative and government supporter, were injured today by the explosion of a bomb which was thrown into the house from an automobile. Mrs. Cainas and three children were rushed to a hospital. Cainas was unhurt.

The house was partly demolished and adjacent buildings were shaken.

Police arrested Juan Gonzales, taxi driver, who said that two students, the oldest apparently 18, hired his car early this morning, directing him to the Cainas residence, warning him not to go slow or to stop. The men threw the bomb package, two minutes later drew guns ordering him to stop, then disappeared.

Rudolph Manns, colored, 25 years old, was shot nine times yesterday by policemen at 137 East 55th street. Manns had been threatening to kill Nora West, his former sweetheart, and Policemen John McQuinn and Thomas McGuire responded to the neighbors' alarm. The West woman was rescued and Manns taken to a hospital.

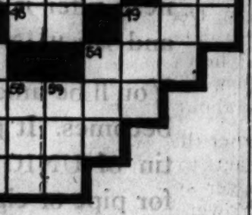
SATURDAY'S PUZZLE SOLVED



BARES RECORDS OF 5,840 PERSONS ON PROBATION

Houston Classes 4,183 as Satisfactory.

John W. Houston, chief adult probation officer, yesterday announced the results of a study of the records of 5,840 persons placed on probation for one year during the year ending Sept. 30, 1931, and at the same time issued a statement saying that he is not in favor of admitting to probation a person who has committed a serious crime, or one who has a long record of petty crimes.

Of the 5,840 granted probation, Mr. Houston's figures show that the records of 4,183 have been satisfactory during the probation period, 111 are doubtful, 1,471 have been unsatisfactory, 33 have been resentenced to the House of Correction, 14 have been sent back to the penitentiary or Pontiac, while 28 are dead. Of the total, 578 were granted probation in the Criminal courts while 5,262 cases were from the Municipal court.

Calls System a Success.

Mr. Houston, a former Municipal court judge who has held the probation post for 21 years, said that on the whole the probation system has been a success, but he advocates more rigid supervision of those allowed their liberty after they have committed a crime.

"My judgment tells me that it is not wise to admit a person to probation for a serious crime, for I find it shocks the community and sometimes encourages young law violators," said Mr. Houston. "Nor do I think a person should get the benefit of the probation act who has a long record of petty crimes. I certainly do not favor the admission to probation of any person who does not come within the law.

Finds Judges Evade Law.

Nor do I believe a person should be given probation when they have been found guilty of petit larceny, the limit of which is $15, and then be ordered to make restitution of thousands of dollars. Nor should the law be violated by illegally releasing a defendant from a penal institution and then invoking the probation law for his benefit.

"If these rules are followed I am sure it would improve the services and be of great benefit to the public. The probation law should be used with the greatest caution and with the end in view of preventing crime and protecting our citizens.

"So far my experience tells me the law has been a success, although we could have done better work if we had a larger force to use in supervision."

Explains Probation Evils.

Mr. Houston said that the part of his statement regarding restitution has to do with the practice of some judges evading the law by finding the amount of the larceny or embezzlement to be not more than $15, which makes probation allowable, and then ordering restitution of a much greater sum, which is the amount actually involved and which should take the case out of the probationable class.

"Many times I personally differ with the judges," said the former judge. "I do not say they are wrong, but in some cases I do not think they should place men on probation. However, we have nothing to say about who should or should not be put on probation. The judge is the boss."

Mr. Houston explained that the results are never known for a year after the person is placed on probation. He further pointed out that those classified as unsatisfactory are in a majority of cases defendants who failed to meet restitution payments ordered by the courts.

WOMEN'S COURT, AN INNOVATION, TO OPEN TODAY

A court for women offenders, said to be the first of its kind in the world, will be opened today as a branch of the Municipal court. It will usher in a new era in dealing with women who come to an accounting with the law.

Judge Joseph A. Graber, in charge of the Domestic Relations court for more than a year, will preside over the Women's court. Yesterday he estimated that the number of women who appear in the various branches of the Municipal court annually will be reduced at least fifty per cent under the new court plan. During the year, he said, 19,000 women were called into the Municipal court.

Sympathy and fair handling of cases will characterize the Woman's court, the judge said. "We believe we can lift a great many women out of the difficulties into which they have fallen and with a little assistance give them a chance to come back and find a place in society," he explained. "It is not the intention of the court to make a wholesale release of women offenders, however."

The new court, Judge Graber said, will aim to break up much of the exploitation of certain classes of defendants. The court is to be on the tenth floor of the police building at 1121 South State street.

MOVES TO STOP MINE PICKETING IN FULTON COUNTY

Prosecutor Acts After 6 Are Hurt in Clash.

Canton, Ill., Oct. 2.—(AP)—All picketing of coal mines in Fulton county, where six men were injured in a mine riot yesterday, will be stopped immediately, State's Attorney H. Ray Senift announced today.

The announcement followed a conference attended by Senift, Sheriff C. C. Prickett, state highway police, and other law enforcement heads.

No National Guardsmen will be called in, Senift added, but enough deputy sheriffs are being sworn in to "prevent picketing in any way, shape, or form."

Yesterday's clash occurred when members of the Progressive Miners' union, composed of rebels from a decision of the United Mine Workers that a basic wage scale of $5 daily should be substituted for the $6.10 which obtained up to April 1, attacked men at work in the Fschirrer and Clearview mines here. Both mines are nonunion.

Some 50 men, trapped in the shaft, were rescued and conveyed to their homes by police, deputies, and guard officers, but in the melee, in which a number of shots were fired, six were injured, one seriously.

Meanwhile the Progressive group organized a massmeeting at St. David, five miles south of Canton, to decide on their plans for tomorrow.

"The mines will open," Senift said after the session. "We are proceeding immediately to organize sufficient men to prevent any picketing of mines in Fulton county.

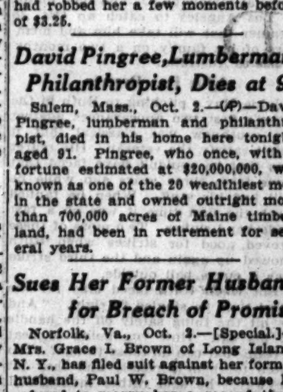
How to Lose Fat a Pound a Day on a Full Stomach

Do Just These Two Simple Things

Fat Melts Away



Science has made important discoveries in fat reduction. The average fat person can now rip off fat a pound a day—four to seven pounds every week!—on a full stomach, with never a hungry moment. Thus it is foolish now to stay fat.

This is what you do: Take a teaspoonful ordinary Jad salts in a glass of water a half hour before breakfast every morning. This reduces moisture-weight instantly. Also cleanses the system of the waste matter and excess toxins that most fat people have, and banishes puffiness and bloat.

Then do this about eating. FILL YOUR STOMACH—eat your fill—of lean meats, vegetables like spinach, cauliflower, cabbage, tomatoes, etc., and lots of salads. Eat a lot. Eat all you can hold. Don't go hungry a minute. Cut down on fatty meats, starches and desserts. Eat any fruit for dessert.

That's all you do. Fat seems to melt away. The coarse lines of overweight give way to the refined ones of slenderness. You lose as much as a pound a day. You feel better than for years. For in this treatment you achieve two important results. The Jad Salts clear your system of toxins. The diet takes off fat with food that turns into energy instead of weight.

If you're tired of being embarrassed by fat, try this way. You'll be glad that you did. You can get Jad Salts at any drug store.

Note particularly—the salts are urged purely as a poison-banishing agent—not as a reducing. The change in food does the work.

HAWAII CHOOSES ITS CANDIDATES; MASSIE AN ISSUE

HONOLULU, T. H., Oct. 2.—(AP)—Lincoln L. McCandless, Democratic candidate for delegate to congress, and Victor S. K. Houston, Republican incumbent seeking reelection, were nominated by their respective parties at yesterday's primary election. Neither candidate had opposition.

McCandless polled nearly 2,000 votes more than the incumbent on the basis of a nearly complete count of precincts. The tally showed: McCandless, 21,661; Houston, 19,789. Should McCandless, who is 71 years old and one of the wealthiest men in the islands, retain his advantage through the coming election it will mark fruition of a long sought achievement. It was the eighth time he has made the race for the office of delegate.

The criminal attack on Mrs. Thomas H. Massie a year ago and the manslaughter conviction of her naval officer husband and three others for slaying one of her alleged attackers echoed in the campaign of McCandless and Houston. McCandless attacked Houston for recommending to Gov. Lawrence M. Judd that the defendants be pardoned. Houston replied that home rule in the islands had been endangered. Had not Massie, Mrs. Granville Fortescue, his mother-in-law, and two naval enlisted men been freed, he averred, there was the serious possibility that congress might limit the power of the territorial government.

RAILROADS CUT WINTER FARES TO WEST COAST

Rate of 3.6c per Mile Seen Discarded.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

With railroad bargain fares rapidly becoming more common and lasting for longer periods of time the supposed standard railway rate of 3.6 cents per mile is becoming a myth.

Today for the first time in history railroads are announcing reduced winter rates to the Pacific coast. Word of this break in passenger fare tradition comes from H. W. Siddall, chairman of the Transcontinental Passenger association.

The fall and winter excursion tickets at the rate of one fare and a quarter for the round trip will be on sale to points in California, Arizona, Oregon, Washington, and British Columbia daily from Nov. 1 to Dec. 22, inclusive, with a final return limit of Jan. 25, 1933. Stopovers are permitted and the traveler is given his choice of direct routes returning.

Move Toward Lower Rates.

On the surface this announcement is not particularly exciting. It is, however, one more important move in the direction of lower basic passenger rates.

Cut rate passenger fares have become so common that the traveler can find a way to save money on almost any trip he cares to take. There are back home excursions almost every week. There are reduced rates for week-end jaunts. Cent a mile excursion tickets good in Pullman and parlor cars as well as coaches are being advertised.

Over the Labor day week-end tens of thousands of people who would not otherwise stirred from where they were traveled to or from Chicago on cut rate tickets. The town folks went to the country and the country folks went to town.

Cuts Fill Trains.

At first timorously, but of late more boldly, the railroads have slashed train fares to get business. They have found

Chicago Trade Moves Ahead in Seasonal Gain

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Last week witnessed continued seasonal improvement in many lines of business in the Chicago area. The best reports came from the railroad and steel industries and the wholesale merchants. Car loadings continued their seasonal upturn; steel operations in the Chicago area registered the best gain for any section of the country and wholesale merchants reported a substantial expansion in the volume of buying.

Along with these reports of better business came news of resulting increase in employment. Employment in railroad shops showed a modest pickup. One of the leading western railroads recalled 200 shop employés, the first important gain in this division reported among the western lines.

Merchants Hire Men.

Wholesale merchants announced that the increased buying had resulted in material additions to the packing room and shipping department forces.

The increased steel operations failed as an immediate employment stimulant but it was seen as a harbinger of better employment conditions in the industry.

A striking feature of the recent seasonal revival is the part played by the small business and industrial firms. Advices from the steel industry attributed the increased operations to the demand from small consumers.

The small shops were important buyers but the major industries which are big consumers of steel were continuing to pursue a cautious buying policy.

Some Purchases Made.

One or two large concerns did announce important commitments for raw materials and it was predicted in trade circles that the larger corporations would soon begin to follow the smaller concerns into the market. It was pointed out that the small concerns with limited overhead usually pave the way for trade improvement.

The better volume of railroad traffic enabled several western carriers to bring operations out of the red. The Chicago and North Western reported that August operations failed to show a deficit for the first time since March. Other western carriers also showed net operating incomes to compare with the deficits produced during the preceding months.

In 1903 there was a little panic on the stock exchange which is known as the "Rich Man's Panic." Thereafter came a depression which lasted half of 1904. By fall of that year, however, a spirited revival was in progress. Vigorous, extraordinarily popular, persuasive Theodore Roosevelt with the Republican party united behind him, had as opponent the quiet, conservative, little known Judge Alton B. Parker, with his party divided in his support. The result was never in doubt. Roosevelt won one of the most sweeping victories in American presidential elections. Stocks rose throughout the fall, rose some more after election, subsided and then went higher the next year.

AMERICAN HOME PRODUCTS PLANS NEW STOCK ISSUE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 2.—Directors of the American Home Products corporation have approved a plan for offering to stockholders 61,100 shares of authorized but unissued capital stock at $37.50 a share, to stockholders of record Oct. 11, 1932.

There are at present outstanding 611,000 shares of the company stock so that the stockholders, under the offer, would be entitled to subscribe for one new share for each ten shares held.

Proceeds of the offering will be used for the payment of $1,500,000 of notes payable, an obligation which was incurred in 1931 when the company acquired the business of John Wyeth & Brother, Inc., of Philadelphia, for cash. The balance will be used for general corporate purposes.

Rails Borrow $31,681,529 to Pay Interest

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 2.—Needy railroads have borrowed a total of $31,681,529 from the railroad credit corporation to meet fixed interest obligations it was disclosed in the monthly report of the corporation filed today with the interstate commerce commission.

The railroad credit corporation was set up by the carriers themselves with the approval of the interstate commerce commission late last year, to administer loans from a pool made up of revenues accruing to all roads through rate increases permitted by the commission.

Rate Paid Nets $35,764,606.

According to the corporation's report, collection of the increased rates amounted to $35,764,606 in the first seven months of this year, the increases having gone into effect on Jan. 4. In July, the last month for which collection figures are available, it was reported, rate collections totaled $4,689,460.

Loans actually made during September, the report showed, totaled $2,071,320, while advances authorized amounted to $4,027,500.

Damaged Cars Increase.

The American Railway association announced today that class one railroads on Sept. 1 had 253,608 freight cars in need of repair, an increase of 7,859 cars over the number in need of repairs on Aug. 1.

Class one roads likewise had 8,396 locomotives needing repairs on Sept. 1, or 105 more than on Aug. 1, the association stated.

Loans for such repair work may be secured by the carriers from the Reconstruction Finance corporation, which has already advanced 2¼ millions to the Pennsylvania for construction of new equipment. The carriers have been urged to seek R. F. C. advances for repairs and maintenance in order to provide work for employés who would otherwise be dismissed.

This compares with a net income of $1,265,174, or $2.53 a share on the 500,000 shares of 7 per cent preferred stock in the first six months of 1931.

During the first six months of this year the surplus account of the company was reduced by $6,798,547 to $16,550,619 on June 30, as compared with $23,349,167 at the beginning of the year. STOCK MARKET AGAIN IS FOUND AT CROSSROADS

Returns to Policy of Marking Time.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 2.—Turning into the year's final quarter, the share market finds itself in a state fondly referred to by literata of the street as suspended animation. It is at another of those crossroads periods of watchful waiting.

Disappointed by the failure of big business to measure up to the fantastic forecasts made in its behalf in the exciting days of the July-August stock rebound and facing a crop of quarterly earnings reports that admittedly are going to be far from imposing, the speculative community has fallen back once more on its old policy of marking time against further developments. As a result price movements on the exchange have reached a condition of virtual stalemate, with business volume again down to the dog day levels of early summer. Saturday's turnover of 338,000 shares was the smallest since July 9 and one of the three smallest in about eight years. Volume for the week was 7,699,350 shares, the lowest in more than two months.

Market Moves Sidewise.

The market has been moving sidewise now virtually ever since the first of September. On the face of 240 issues comprising the twenty principal groups of the list values have changed only about 3 per cent in the last month. The drift has been to a lower level. Depreciation for the 1,200 and odd stocks listed on the exchange is figured at about $422,283,000. This compares with a gain of about $4,041,656,665, or 36 per cent, scored by the market in its hard clicking advance in August, and an advance of 34 per cent

Corporation Ownership

Financial Editor: For a good many decades now we have witnessed the pyramiding of ownership through the intercorporation control of railroad and manufacturing industries and public utilities and match companies, a record strewn with the wreckage of defunct corporations, ruined stockholders, imprisoned officials, etc.

I should be interested if you would be willing to discuss the feasibility of prohibiting the voting of stock ownership by one corporation in another, and even the question of limiting corporations to the ownership of their own stock.

My suggestion is based on the fact that corporations are creatures of the state. As such individuals there is no reason why the state should extend to them privileges which it seems dangerous for them to have and it strikes me that the fact that corporations can be manipulated through stock ownership by parallel institutions or superimposed institutions has been at the heart of a good share of the difficulties which have confronted us in the last thirty years with reference to mismanagement and colossal inflation.

Suggests Buyers' Trains.

Financial Editor: I see you are looking for good news. Well, here goes: Last week I was in Jacksonville, Fla.—this week I am in Chicago. The reason I am here is because I was able to take advantage of an excursion rate of $17 for the round trip.

On the train up here I met at least a score of store owners who were going to St. Louis and Chicago to do their fall buying. These small buyers would have had to remain at home had they to pay the regular fare of $100 and consequently the manufacturer would have lost sales.

May I offer a suggestion—we have been running excursions for the vacationist all summer, why not let's run "buyers' excursions?" Give low rates from all over the United States to the great buying centers and advertise them as Buyers Special trains. Let the small merchant have a chance to come to the markets at a price he can afford. Once he is there he will see the new items and the small town will take on a fresher look when he returns with new stocks.

Better yet—let's get the salesmen back on the road. Nothing, not even special trains, can stimulate business like the happy, cheer spreading knights of the road. Some of these manufacturers with cold feet would be agreeably surprised at the business they would get if they put their salesmen back on the road.

The traveling salesman is necessary for good times—watch hotels, railroads, restaurants and business in general pick up when he starts out. Why make the small merchant leave his store in order to order merchandise? The small merchant wants to buy, but since the salesman do not come to him he is forced to go to the manufacturer. Put the salesman back on the road.

STOCK MARKET AGAIN IS FOUND AT CROSSROADS

Returns to Former Policy of Watchful Waiting.

Measured in points the change since the market came to its early September halt has amounted to—still figuring on the basis of the 240 "group" stocks—minus .664, which compares with a plus of 5.653 in August and a minus of 8.751 in September of last year.

Sponsorship Withdrawn.

Obviously the so-called "banking" sponsorship so largely responsible for the upturn so far in advance of any visible evidence of business improvement has now been very largely withdrawn. Some signs of coordinated activity are still to be witnessed occasionally in stocks popularly regarded as pool favorites, but even the efforts so lately prominent in their behalf have shown a marked letdown during the last week. Montgomery Ward, Case, United Aircraft, and a handful of issues of that caliber represent the dwindling rear guard of this erstwhile flourishing group of pets.

Observers are agreed that the market needs help if it is to fulfill its late promise to show the way out of the three year old depression. It has reached the critical stage of the so-called autumn test period. The situation, as brokers view it, is "up to" business, commodities and the financial powers that be. Commodities have been doing their bit in fine shape up to now, but they, too, have been able to do little more than maintain their levels during the last week.

Cotton has lost about $2 a bale and wheat is a cent a bushel or so below where it was a week ago. Of the major indices of business only two, electric power output and freight car loadings, have shown any appreciable improvement.

Situation in Steel.

Steel operations have expanded another point or so, but the gain in that industry is decidedly disappointing when placed alongside the reports of "inquiries" and "prospects" which were coming out of the centers of activity only the other day. Incidentally, some hard-headed statisticians have been standing up in the meeting to call attention to the fact that a large percentage of what improvement has been made in that industry has represented demands on government inspired projects such as new public buildings and the like—work which must be paid for in public taxes in the long run.

Politics probably will be a factor of increasing importance as election day nears—it always is. The unfilled tonnage report of the United States Steel corporation due on Oct. 10 may have some influence one way or the other, and after that will come an endless string of earnings reports, with their respective tales of recuperative progress made by the reporting companies—if any—since the upturn is supposed to have begun. Dividend meetings of the week include those of the boards of Columbian Carbon, Borden company, General Cigar, and Columbia Gas and Electric.

Corporate Trust Officers to Be Given Greater Power

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 2.—A survey of dealers shows that approximately 76 per cent of the holders of Corporate Trust Shares will agree to the modification of the trust which was recently proposed to the shareholders, it was announced today by Cedric H. Smith, vice president of the American Depositor corporation. The modification clause provides the trust with more latitude in the elimination from the portfolio of stocks on which dividends have been passed.

Miscellaneous Steel Demand Boosts Ingot Production

New York, Oct. 2.—(AP)—Trade estimates were to the effect that miscellaneous demand for steel products has accounted for a further gain in ingot production during the last week.

BANKERS ARRIVING IN LOS ANGELES TO ATTEND CONVENTION

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 2.—[Special.]—The vanguard of visitors to the fifty-eighth annual convention of the American Bankers' association began taking over Los Angeles hotels today, in preparation for a program of social functions preceding the formal sessions at which Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills will be a guest of honor. Three thousand persons are listed as attending the convention.

H. D. Pettibone, president of Chicago Title and Trust company, is to address the convention on "Trusteeship, a Business," and H. N. Stronck, Chicago bank management consultant, will speak on "Fundamental Banking Policies and Principles" on Tuesday.

Gov. Conner of Mississippi will take the forum with a discussion of Mississippi's experiences with the sales tax on Wednesday. His topic is "The Relation of Taxation to the Public Welfare."

Fifteen thousand bankers are members of the association, and the combined resources they represent are said to amount to sixty billion dollars.

THIRD QUARTER EARNINGS LIKELY TO SHOW UPTREND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 2.—For the first time in three years the earnings reports of many industrial companies are likely to show normal seasonal expansion for the third quarter, according to agencies which have made a survey of the activities of units in various lines of business. The improvement of trade in September is held largely accountable for the quarter's gains.

In a few cases corporations have benefited from more than seasonal improvement and as a result will report earnings equal to or greater than their profit in the third quarter of last year. These reports, however, are regarded as inconclusive, since the majority of companies will report smaller earnings for the third quarter than in the corresponding period of 1931.

Summer Dullness Hurts.

The fact, however, that several large companies have been able to improve on their last year's record, despite the sharp decline in commodity prices and the general volume of business in the last twelve months, is regarded by brokers as distinctly encouraging. Were it not that many companies passed through a period of extremely dull business during July and the early part of August an even larger number would be able to show improvement for the last quarter, it is said.

Among the companies which are expected to show earnings equal to or greater than they reported in the third quarter of last year are Coca Cola, International Business Machines, First National Stores, American Tobacco, Kroger Grocery, and Gillette Safety Razor.

Some of these companies do not issue quarterly reports, so that it may not be possible to learn the extent of their gains until the end of the year.

Oil Industry Better Off.

In addition, virtually the entire oil industry, including all of the Standard Oil units, are expected to show a substantial increase in earnings in the last quarter compared with the corresponding period of last year. In the second quarter of this year the oil industry showed a large gain in earnings compared with 1931, and this improved trend, it is believed, was carried into the third quarter. The larger earnings of the oil industry were achieved in spite of a 16 per cent decline in oil consumption. The improvement was made possible by higher prices for petroleum products.

Many units in the textile industry have likewise shown more than seasonal improvement in the last quarter. The sharp rise in textile operations, which followed the advance of cotton prices in July and August was one of the most encouraging developments of the third quarter.

Lower Inventories Help.

In the retail merchandising field a seasonal increase in sales during September has not been sufficient to offset the decline in volume of business for the quarter caused by lower prices this year and by the dull trade in July. Nevertheless, many units in this line are expected to approach their earnings in the third quarter of last year owing to improved inventory conditions. In the third quarter of 1931 the decline in prices caused heavy inventory adjustments at the end of the period, whereas this year prices have risen during the corresponding three months.

The heavy industries, including the automobile and steel manufacturing companies, are almost the only important ones which have shown a lagging tendency. This, however, is not regarded as surprising, since the steel industry is traditionally slow to stage a recovery from a depression. In the automobile industry, while the total volume of business has remained at a low level, many companies have reported more than seasonal expansion in retail sales. Despite this gain the industry was operating without profit in the third quarter, it is believed.

STEEL OUTPUT RATE ADVANCES TO 18 PER CENT

Highest Point Since Early in June.

Cleveland, O., Oct. 2.—(AP)—The steel production rate advanced one point last week to 18 per cent, the highest since the first week of June and a gain of 4¼ per cent during September, said Steel today.

"This unbroken rise in production through September rather accurately reflects an increase in the number of moderate size orders from average consumers," the magazine said in its weekly survey. "To a lesser degree, some of the expansion in operations the last 10 days resulted from a bunching of specifications for more economical rolling.

On Broader Base.

"As the new quarter opens, the iron and steel markets unquestionably are on a broader base. While consumers have been building up inventories slightly, most recent bookings have passed into consumption. For the former there will be no immediate reordering: it is believed consumption will continue to grow.

"But for October to develop improvement comparable with that of September will require more active support from such tonnage outlets as the railroads and the automotive and building industries.

"Indications are that railroad and automotive needs will gain; building is more doubtful as projects which are candidates for self-liquidating loans are being put through a third degree that will eliminate many.

Wait Until Election.

"October promises to be a mixed month. The imminence of the national elections is sponsoring a 'wait until after election' attitude in some quarters. Financial statements for the third quarter, which will be issued beginning the last week of the month, will make unpleasant reading. The United States Steel corporation on Oct. 25 faces a decision on the preferred dividend.

"Hence the industry enters October no less confident of the long pull but a little more sober over th immdiate situation. It is not improbable that the taking off of some capacity may break the upward line of production."

U. S. STEEL ORDER MAY RESULT IN FRENCH PROTEST

(Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.)

PARIS, France, Oct. 2.—The French government in conjunction with other European countries is preparing to enter a diplomatic protest at Washington against the latest restrictions on the importation of steel products into the United States, it became known today. It is alleged the restrictions constitute a virtual boycotting of foreign steel.

Although it is true French exporters are not involved in dumping charges now being investigated in Washington against Belgian concerns, producers here are hit by the recent ruling that all steel products must be stamped with the name of the country of origin. Then last week the treasury ruled that continental exporters must deposit in the United States security equivalent to the invoice value of the shipment before being permitted to land material, according to newspaper reports received here.

It is held these rulings make exportations so risky it is hardly worth while to try to carry on business. The countries affected are France, Belgium, Germany, Holland and Luxemburg and it is understood they are almost ready to make a collective protest to Washington. France's steel exports to the United States, as a matter of fact, are rather small, Great Britain being her chief market.

LARGER STEEL OUTPUT.

Youngstown Sheet and Tube company operations in this district this week will advance to 13 per cent of capacity, against 9 per cent currently.

N. Y. BANK NOTES GAIN IN BUSINESS; WARNS OF OVER-OPTIMISM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 2.—The last month brought further recovery from the period of fear and credit strain as it gave some indications of expanding business activity, says the current bulletin of the National City bank. Nevertheless, the bank sounds a note of warning against the tendency to expect too rapid a revival.

"The improvement has proceeded unevenly," the bank says, "and its failure to reach the heavy industries with more vigor has been viewed in some quarters as a cause for disappointment. Where this is the feeling, however, the fault is in too high expectations. Experienced observers understand that the first impetus for the upward move comes from the exhaustion of stocks of apparel and other goods of every day necessity, which are used up faster than they are replaced, leading inevitably to a renewal of buying and of production to take care of current needs.

"The pickup now taking place is largely of this character. The improvement in industries whose products are less urgently needed awaits gains in purchasing power, the carrying out of replacements and expansion projects, and the growth of confidence promoting capital investment. Therefore, it comes more slowly.

"The financial improvement has continued. Currency is coming back from hoarding and gold is coming to this country from abroad. Together they are replacing federal reserve bank credit in the banking reserves, and this is a desirable change, for reserve bank policies have been subject to a good deal of misinterpretation and a cause of misgiving in some places, whereas every one understands that additions to the credit base through return of currency and good receipts are wholly favorable. Thus the change is not only helpful to the banking position, but promotes confidence that is necessary if the credit is to be used."

NEW YORK CURB TRADING SINKS TO LOW LEVELS

New York, Oct. 2.—(AP)—Trading in shares listed on the New York Curb exchange was at low levels of activity last week, with evidence of thinness making a reappearance. The market, on the whole, was heavy.

Utilities in the common share section were somewhat soft. Electric Bond and Share narrowed its range of fluctuation, having an extreme dip of about half a dozen points. Commonwealth Edison and American Gas also reacted. There were, however, numerous advances in preferred issues.

Oils weakened on reports of further gasoline price cutting and indications that the statistical position generally had become unsettled. Humble was inactive, but dropped 5 points in one session, while Gulf and Indiana sagged.

OFFICIAL WEATHER FORECAST.

Ohio—Increasing cloudiness followed by showers Monday night and probably in extreme north portion late Monday afternoon; Tuesday cloudy and colder.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 4TH.

I want ten managers and one hundred red blooded salesmen to join me immediately in one of the greatest sales campaigns ever inaugurated in Chicago. It is new—it is sure—it is safe.

My friends, old and new, I want to shake your hands again. Hundreds of men and women in Chicago made more money with me than with any other connection before or since. Sufficient hundreds of others wanted to join my organization. Again you have that opportunity—the new deal and plan will make you think of the good old days when you received a check of $100.00 to $250.00 every week. Take my word, you can do it again—right now—right here in Chicago.

Remember, you are to be my guest at luncheon TUESDAY, OCTOBER 4TH, AT TWELVE NOON, at which time I, personally, will tell you the story.

Good eats—good music—good money. Get your free luncheon card of admission today.
